Teen Challenge Helps Addicts Turn Their Lives Around

Strawberries were planted for the first time two years ago at Teen Challenge. This year, four acres of strawberries formed the backbone of a lot of early morning work for about 90 at the center. From left, Ralph Chapin, building, grounds, and vocational administrator; Eric Hole, farm manager; and Art Gibson, assistant farm manager.

REHRERSBURG (Berks Co.) — Kevin Clancy realized long ago that to survive he needed to make drastic changes in his life.

Early in 1987, Clancy, in his late twenties, was living in Upper Darby, married with three kids. He was a drug addict, he admitted, was very violent and full of pride and selfishness.

With the constant support of his wife Donna, Clancy served a few months in a Germantown induction center for troubled youth.

After the induction center, Clancy came to Teen Challenge in March 1987. But after having adjusted to the stringent work ethic imposed on all who are registered at the Teen Challenge Training Center, after having survived a rigorous program that brought him to the rank of an intern . . . Clancy found himself demoted because he broke a rule. Instead of going to a seminar, as he was ordered, he went to a graduation.

After the demotion, Clancy remembered walking back from the dairy farm, wanting to quit the Teen Challenge program altogether. But as he admitted, while standing in a field, "God grabbed a hold of me and told me my entire life is centered on this time. Would I submit to the disciplinary action and be a man, or continue to be a baby and quit the program?"

Clancy said, "I chose what God wanted me to do."

As a result, he went back on a track that would eventually lead to him graduating from the Teen Challenge Training Center program in 1988 and back on the track of a positive lifestyle. He worked for three different dairy farms in Lebanon County, in training to be a herds manager. But, while working part-time on youth ministry programs, it wasn't long before Clancy was asked to be full-time associate director of inner-city ministries at the Lebanon Valley Youth For Christ.

Clancy now works with about 300 elementary school students as part of the inner-city missions with the multidenominational program to keep kids from drugs and alcohol. He speaks openly about the challenges he faced.

Clancy said that he "tells it like it is" and is very blunt about

ADC, Dairy Partnership Network Use Bay Trip To Discuss Strategy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Cheasapeake Bay Foundation's educational oysterboat, a 1902-era skipjack sailboat called the Stanley Norman, is moored at City Dock in Annapolis, Md., just off of the intersection of Compromise and Main streets.

It set sail Tuesday with a manifest that included members of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation (CBF), Pennsylvania State University Extension personnel, the Rodale Institute, the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), staff and board members of the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, USDA Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program, a representative of the artificial insemination industry, and a representative of the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS).

The purpose of the trip was twofold, but the tenor of the day trip was perhaps best reflected by the crossroads at City Dock — an intersection of compromise and "main street" thinking.

The primary reason for the trip on the Stanley Norman was to demonstrate and educate about the bay and the effects of sedimentation, nutrification, massive residential and industrial development, forest and stream buffer removal and minimal or nonconcern with earthmoving activities, and the loss of practically all of the filter feeding oysters.

The second reason for the trip was to present a concept proposal

Dairy Knowledge, Eye For Cattle Marketing At Cornerstone Of Farm's Success

JOANNE E. MORVAY

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — In a 10-stall, Virginia-style flat barn that's as clean as the show rings they're used to working in, Dale and Deanna Bendig are building their future. While other producers opt out of the dairy business and the small, family farm appears to many to be a slowly dying tradition, the Bendigs are creating an operation that has at its foundation the hard work and management practices that have made dairy farming one of the nations's oldest and best-loved professions.

Both third-generation farmers who couldn't imagine doing anything else, the couple is hoping that their mix of labor and knowledge — along with a keen eye for cattle marketing — will allow their farm to survive.

Their basic tenet is a simple one: "The cows come first, because they're the ones that gotta pay the bills," Dale explained.

A friendly man with a shock of curly brown hair who's always ready with a joke — even when it means laughing at himself — Dale said he enjoys the challenge of "making that little milk check pay for a big box of bills every month." Even more satisfying is "taking a cow and making her better," he said.

Deanna's love of dairying is similar, but her interest is motivated at its heart by a love of cows and other animals.

"It's in your blood," she explained. "If you get out of it, most of the time you go back. And I've been working in the barn since I was wee little." Married for just three years, the couple met showing cattle. The six years between their ages made a difference then since Deanna, as a teenager, had no interest in going anywhere with Dale, who kept asking her out after shows.

Comfortable in the show ring since his earliest days in 4-H, Dale was 21 when he started fitting and showing professionally for other cattlemen. Lured by the travel, independence and — of course — the fun, he spent nearly eight years on the show circuit going from state convention to state convention and working the myriad sales and nationalexpos between. Deanna was 21 before she finally gave in to one of Dale's endless dinner invitations. When it looked like there was more to him than she

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
JUNE 19, 1996

Grain and soybean bids finished mixed with wheat and soybean bids lower and corn slightly higher. Wheat 3 to 9 cents lower. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 1 to 4 cents higher. Soybeans 5 to 9 cents lower. Wheat bids turned moderately lower on harvest pressure, favorable planting weather, and lack of export business this week. However, continued concerns over the soft red winter wheat crop condition, limited declines. Corn bids inched higher again today, supported by recent wet weather and flooded fields. Damage has not been completely assessed yet. Very poor export interest this week, undermined bids. Lower soybean bids were influenced by weakness in wheat pits. Bean planting is over 80 percent complete and farmers are rushing to get them in the ground. Export News: Commodity Tonnage Del date Nothing new to report. OPINION

Dr. Alter Seems Good Choice

Some ways for two people to hold arms together to maintain a solid connection are better than others.

The best ways allow the link to be strong when it's stressed. It's much more than a handshake grip.

Penn State University seems to have found one of the best ways of maintaining its arm-link with the rest of the Pennsylvania community in naming Dr. Theodore R. Alter to serve as interim dean of its College of Agricultural Sciences.

While the university is to continue its national search for a permanent dean, we are confident that Dr. Alter will be doing more than maintaining control of college spending until a new administrator comes along to get programs moving.

Alter succeeds James Starling as interim dean, who actually extended retirement plans to help the college until a permanent dean could be selected.

Starling's tenure since January has been much appreciated. Effective July 1, he is moving on, however, and with the agenda of change promised by University Dean James Spanier—especially with the outlook of expanding the reach of extension into other colleges within the university and with changes in programming promised for many of its satellite campuses—Alter seems well qualified and prepared to lead.

He has a solid background in serving and administering a spectrum of Penn State Extension programs and his academic specialization in economics and rural sociology would seem to give him the outlook and scope of understanding that the college and the community needs.

Colleges are more than places to prepare for a specific job in an established industry—they are places where the ideas that drive tomorrow's established industries are born, and the places where minds are opened and hope is nurtured.

Alter's expected term of one year, or until a new dean is identified through the national search, is perhaps one of the most critical.

While the state's lawmakers are currently dealing with issues that will affect Penn State's future and how it changes—including a budget—Alter seems a solid choice to allow the college and the university to maintain its interlocking grasp of mutual support with the Pennsylvania community through this anticipated walk together into the future.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Beware Of Poisonous Plants

According to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, a number of toxic plants grow naturally in our pastures, woodlands, and wastelands.

Others we plant as ornamentals. Fortunately, animals have the good sense to avoid many of these plants.

As we approach the hot, dry days of summer, pasture growth slows down and feed becomes more scarce. This may force animals to consume some of these toxic plants in an effort to satisfy their hunger.

The following practices may help reduce the risk of poisoning:

- Never allow pastured animals to become hungry. If necessary, offer them some hay or silage to supplement the feed they receive from pastures.
- Fence animals away from wild cherry trees. Pick up broken wild cherry limbs immediately. Wilted wild cherry leaves are very toxic to animals.
- Do not throw clippings from shrubs and flowers into the pasture. Many of these clippings, especially yews, are very toxic.
- Do not graze sudan grass or sorghum/sudan hybrids until they are about 18 inches tall or when they have been stressed by drought, hail, frost, etc. Under these conditions, prussic acid levels may be dangerously high.

To Space Fence Wires Properly

For effective animal control, wire spacing is more important than fence height, reports Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent.

More animals go through and under fences than over them. Proper wire spacing makes your fences more effective.

Regardless of how many wires your fence has, always position one wire at the shoulder height of the animal to be controlled. This is the "nose wire" that your animals see and touch when they approach the fence.

Other fence wires should be spaced according to the type of animal: 10 to 12 inches apart for cattle and horses and 6 to 8 inches apart for sheep and goats. The bottom wires should be closer together than the top wires.

Fences taller than 48 inches are not really necessary. In many countries, livestock fences are seldom over 42 inches tall. Electric fences may even be lower, 36 inches for cattle and horses and 30 inches for sheep and goats. Shorter fences also allow closer wire spacing.

To Look For Corn Borer Damage

Dr. Timothy Elkner, extension horticultural agent, reports that corn borer moths have appeared in local blacklight traps.

Now that moths have appeared, females are likely laying egg masses. During this first flight, they are more likely to lay eggs on taller corn plantings which are approaching tasseling stage than on younger stalks.

About a week after the first moths appear, you will begin to see the characteristic "shot hole" damage from larval feeding. This feeding damage may be used as a threshold in your decisions concerning sprays for corn borer.

The guidelines we use state that if 15 to 30 percent of the plants have shot hole damage, a spray for corn borer is justified. This spray probably does not specifically affect larvae occurring in the ears at harvest; rather, it prevents early damage to the rest of the plant.

The spray is most effective when directed downward into the whorl. This is where the larvae are most likely to be feeding.

Careful and consistent scouting of sweet corn fields will help determine exactly when control measures for borers are necessary. By comparing scouting information with trap catch data from your area, an accurate estimation of the corn borer population may be made. When the population is low, you may skip sprays and save both time and money.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "With enough determination, goals never before thought possible may be achieved."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

SMART, BUT UNWISE
June 23, 1996

Background Scripture:
James 1:5-8, 3:1-5a, 13-18
Devotional Reading:
Job 28:12-18, 23-28

Many, many years ago, someone said to me of something I enthusiastically proposed, "Oh, I agree it's a smart course of action, but is it wise?"

Up until then, I'm not sure that I distinguished one from the other. I had assumed that "smart" and "wise" were pretty much the same thing. But, upon reflection, I realize that I had experienced a number of obviously smart people who were not, in the long run, very wise.

The word "smart" originated as a German word — schmerz — that meant "painful." This can be traced back to a common Indo-European word that became smerdnos — "terrible" — in Greek and mordere — "bit" — in Latin. The word entered the English language in the 11th century and meant "stinging, painful" although today it is used mostly to mean either "clever" or "neat."

UNLIMITED STUPIDITY

Often cleverness carries the connotation of arrogance. It is intelligence with pride that sometimes lives up to its origins and brings us pain. We can be too smart for our own good. The late German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer said, "The good Lord set definite limits on man's wisdom, but set no limits on his stupidity — and that's not fair!" There is no stupidity like smartness, because it seduces us into thinking too highly of our own intelligence. To put it simply: there are lots of people who profess to have all the answers, but who are actually arrogantly stupid. Wisdom makes us humble, not proud.

That's why James counsels, "Let not many of you become teachers, my brethren, for you know that we who teach shall be judged with greater strictness" (3:1). It is an awesome responsibility to assume the role of teacher or preacher. Why? James says, "For we all make many mistakes . . ." (3:2). Note: he says "all." Not "some of us," "those other guys," but "all." So why is it that so many teachers and preachers (OK — and writers) speak with the aura of those who are never wrong?

James warns us: "So the tongue is a little member and boasts of great things. How great a forest is set ablaze by a small fire!" (3:5). Personal conviction of certainty does not make something true. We may be like the judge who one day confessed, "This court is often in error, but never in doubt." Actually, he or she who would teach others must sometimes doubt in their own wisdom.

DOUBLE-MINDED

Christians then must seek to be wise, not smart. And James says: "if any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask God . . . and it will be given him" (1:5). I have a feeling that James' advice is largely unused. For how can you earnestly ask for what you already think you have? Actually, when we think we're already pretty smart, we end up praying that God will make others wise-translation: agree with us. The double-minded person may pray for wisdom, but fail to receive it because he already thinks he has it.

So, with all these people who claim to have "the truth," how do we know who to believe? James gives us an interesting rule of thumb? "Who is wise and understanding among you? By his good life let him show his works in the meekness of wisdom" (3:13). Not by our clever words, our arresting style, the volume or pitch of our voices, nor the proof-texts we can assemble to make our point, but by the "good life" of Christlike good works that we perform "in the meekness of wisdom."

When in doubt as to what is or is not wisdom, the words of James are instructive: "But the wisdom from above is first pure, than peaceable, gentle, open to reason, full of mercy and good fruits, without uncertainty or insincerity. And the harvest of righteousness is sown in peace by those who make peace" (3:17,18).

If it doesn't make peace, it isn't wisdom.

BACS Summer Field Days-

You are cordially invited to attend one or all of the three scheduled field days to be sponsored and hosted by Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, Inc. (BACS) at our Hibshman Homestead Research Farm in Ephrata, Lancaster County.

Dates of the field days are June 25, July 25 and September 4, 1996.

Currently, there are 40+ plots being used for a variety of research projects such as:

- Fertility Trials
- Pesticide Trials
- Herbicide-Resistant Crops
- Variety Trials
- Row Width Studies

(NOTE: New Time)

The field days will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. A free lunch will be provided and guided tours of the plots will be given by Rob Kauffman and BACS agronomists. In addition, various agribusiness representatives will be on hand to answer any questions you may have.

Please call the BACS office at (717)859-3276 if you have questions, need directions, or would like to make reservations.

Vitamic C Helps Boars Beat The Heat

PRINCETON, N.J. — When temperatures rise, conception rates fall. It's a fact of life taken for granted on hog farms around the country.

But research suggests that supplementing boar rations with vitamin C may help minimize the typical summer slump, said University of Kentucky animal scientist Dr. Merlin Lindemann.

The reason: the vitamin appears to help protect sperm from heat-related damage.

Because swine synthesize vitamin C in the liver, the industry hasn't worried much about the nutrient, Lindemann points out. In fact, the National Research Council (NRC) doesn't even estimate a dietary vitamin C requirement for swine.

But the question is whether hogs produce enough vitamin C to meet their needs during hot weather and other stress conditions, especially given the high levels of production expected on today's farms.

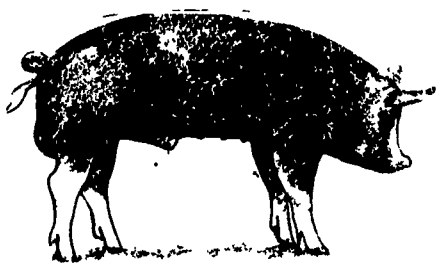
"There's been quite a bit of work in other species that manufacture vitamin C showing a response to supplementation during periods of heat stress," Lindemann said. "The swine studies to date have been limited, but they do appear very favorable and fit in with all the concepts involved in vitamin C metabolism. If you put them together with the work in other species, they seem to indicate that breeding boars, especially in situations of high heat stress, might be a very responsive animal to supplementation."

For instance, Taiwanese researchers found that sperm count fell by a little over 25 percent in unsupplemented boars from April into June and remained depressed at that level through October. The drop was halved to about 12 percent in boars whose ration was supplemented to provide 300 milligrams of vitamin C per head daily.

"The researchers also found more abnormalities in the unsupplemented boars' sperm; these cumulative effects on the semen/sperm quality could potentially be related to greater returns to estrus or lower conception rates in sows that were bred to those boars," Lindemann said. "All those measures were responsive to vitamin C supplementation."

Scientists still don't know exactly why vitamin C supplementation seems to influence sperm counts and quality during summer heat, but Lindemann points out that the testes normally contain a relatively high concentration of vitamin C. In addition, human research at the University of California/Berkeley suggests that increased concentrations of vitamin C, which is an antioxidant, help protect the sperm from damage by highly reactive oxygen-derived substances, which are natural but often harmful byproducts of metabolism.

One of the challenges when feeding vitamin C, Lindemann points out, is the instability of the vitamin. To offset that, he recommends checking to make sure any vitamin C product used in swine rations is a stabilized form.



Here Are Strategies To Manage Compaction

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Aside from filling in ruts, there is little producers can do this spring to correct deeply compacted fields, said Jim Graeber, Northrup King agronomist for Illinois.

Deep tillage at this time usually results in yield losses. During a dry spring, tillage carries an additional risk as it reduces already limited soil moisture.

Graeber acknowledges that winter temperature swings can help reduce compaction. This year's light snow cover, combined with extreme cold temperatures, drove frost deep into the soil, helping to break up compacted layers. Unfortunately, it may take several years of these freezing and thawing cycles to correct deep compaction problems.

Badly compacted fields are not good candidates for first-year no-till, Graeber warns. Instead, growers should follow a conventional tillage program for one more year, then deep-till the field in the fall. If producers must no-till a compacted field, the Northrup King agronomist recommends planting soybeans. Soybeans, which have a more vigorous taproot system, can tolerate compaction better than corn.

Severe soil compaction may be a yield-limiting factor for several years. As a result, Graeber advises growers to correct compacted areas with fall tillage. To identify soil compaction problems, growers should look for corn roots that exhibit horizontal, rather than vertical growth. Other more visible signs include slow or uneven plant growth, poor drainage, and drought stress.

Vegetable Marketing Program Receives $10,000 In Matching Funds

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Secretary of Agriculture has approved $10,000 in matching funds from the Department of Agriculture to the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program to erect billboards promoting Pennsylvania vegetables around the state.

The program will match the state money with $5,000 from the program's budget and $5,000 from the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association.

The matching promotion funds were included by the General Assembly in last year's budget and awarded by the secretary of agriculture to several different commodity groups who made proposals.

More than 30 billboards around the state will feature the colorful artwork of the "Pennsylvania Proven Produce" logo along with the text "Pennsylvania Vegetables — The Best." The outdoor advertising campaign during July and early August is being conducted in cooperation with the American Cancer Society. The Cancer Society, whose logo will also appear in the billboard, also promotes increased vegetable consumption to decrease a person's risk of cancer.

The ability of the program to double industry money with state money is making this paid advertisement campaign possible for the first time in the program's history.

The Vegetable Marketing and Research Board will also continue its ongoing promotional efforts for Pennsylvania vegetables. Throughout the growing season, it will be sending news releases about the various Pennsylvania vegetable crops to the news media across the state throughout the growing season.

Over the years, these news releases have resuled in hundreds of food-page newspaper articles about Pennsylvania vegetables that have reached millions of readers. It is one of the most cost-effective methods to reach those who make the household food-buying decisions.

This year the program plans to send out over ten releases during July, August, and September highlighting the Pennsylvania vegetable harvest. That makes this year's effort one of the most extensive yet.

The program also supplies colorful point-of-purchase materials for grower farm markets across the state. These feature the "Pennsylvania Proven Produce" logo and emphasize the nutritional value of vegetables.

F.O.4 NFMS $1.18

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Adminstrator Rex F. Lothrop has announced a producer nonfat milk solids price of $1.18 per pound for May 1996.

The weighted average differential base milk price was 43 cents per hundredweight and the price per pound of butterfat ws 94.73 cents.

The producers NFMS price was up 19 cents from last year while the base differential decreased $1.36.

The standardized base milk price per hundredweight for producer milk with the market average nonfat milk solids content and 3.5 percent butterfat would have been $14.03 and the excess price would have been $13.60. This represents a base price increase of $1.22 per hundredweight from the previous year.

The excess price increased $2.58 from last May. The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was $1.1879 per pound for the month, up 19.8 cents from last May.

The weighted average price for May was $14.05 per hundredweight and would have been approximately 46 cents higher without the effect of the Class III-A price.

Mr. Lothrop said that producer receipts totaled 512.7 million pounds during May, a decrease of 46.2 million pounds from last May and the average daily delivery of 3,550 pounds per producer decreased 56 pounds or 1.6 percent from a year earlier.

Total nonfat milk solids production for the month was 44.7 million pounds. This represents an average NFMS test of 8.72 percent, down from 8.73 percent last May.

Class I producer milk totaled 220.0 million pounds and was down 2.7 million pounds, or 1.2 percent from last May. Class I milk accounted for 42.90 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, compared with 39.85 percent in May 1995.

Base milk accounted for 90.39 percent of total producer milk receipts in May compared with 88.63 percent last year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.63 percent, up from 3.57 percent last May.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 181.2 million pounds during May, a decrease of 6.6 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

Get Back Fuel Tax

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The refund claim forms for liquid fuel taxes paid by farmers have been sent out to all registered claimants, according to a news release by the Pennsylvania Board of Finanace and Revenue in Harrisburg.

Anyone who has paid the 12 cents per gallong tax on liquid fuels used in the actual production of agricultural products may receive a refund of those taxes, as long as a claim is filed on or before Sept. 30.

Famers are exempt from the tax, however, as the system works, the tax is paid first and then returned after the end of the fiscal year in which the tax was paid.

Filing for a refund is to be done for fuel taxes paid between July 1, 1995 and June 30, 1996, the state's fiscal year.

To make a claim, a form available from the Board of Finance and Revenue must be completed and submitted with a record of the fuel purchase and tax paid. The record can either be the actual paid receipts, copies of the same, or a statement from the fuel dealer showing the claimants name, dates, the number of gallons purchased and verification that the state tax has been paid.

Those requesting forms should either write to Lynne Vergot, supervisor, Board of Finance and Revenue, Room 500C Finance Building, Harrisburg, PA 17120; or call her at (717) 787-6534.

The sooner the claim is submitted, the earlier the refund will be received.

After two years of submitting claims, the forms will automatically be sent to the claimant in the years following.

Law Protects Farmers From Nuisance Suits

Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius applauded Gov. Ridge for signing Senate Bill 1371 and Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee Chairman Roger A. Madigan (R-Bradford) for sponsoring the bill.

"The new law protects farmers from nuisance suits by expanding the definition of normal agricultural operations and permitting the use of equipment necessary to the daily operation of these businesses," Brosius said. He noted that the law also prohibits municipalities from enacting local ordinances which seek to outlaw generally-accepted agricultural operations.

"With the disappearance of Pennsylvania's farmland, comes new development and new homeowners moving to the country," he added. "Sometimes the new neighbors forget that our 50,000 farm families provide us with a bountiful supply of nutritious food, along with nearly $44 billion annually in related economic activity.

"The Ridge Administration believes that farmers must have the freedom to conduct their operations without the threat of burdensome ordinances and unnecessary lawsuits."

Brosius noted that the new law applies to those farmers with at least 10 contiguous acres of land or gross income exceeding $10,000.

Under the new law, the definition of "customary equipment" includes crop dryers, feed grinders, saw mills, hammer mills and refrigeration equipment.

Pa. Ayrshire Association To Hold Picnic

TROY (Bradford Co.) — The Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association has announced an open invitation to all interested to attend its annual summer picnic, scheduled to be held June 29 at the Shade Hill Farm in Troy.

The Mark and Mayme Carter family, owners of Shade Hill Farm, are serving as host of the picnic and field day event, and promise a day full of family fun and fellowship.

Starting at 10 a.m. with coffee and donuts, events are to kick off at 10:30 a.m.

While complete plans were not yet finished, according to a news release this week, activities already scheduled include a demonstration of a new classification program being performed by a well-known artificial insemination company, a brief association business meeting, lunch, news from the national association, updates on artificial insemination opportunities for Ayrshire breeders, grazing information, and other related topics.

The farm is located north of Troy along Porter Road. For more information, contact Bonnie Wentworth, promotion coordinator for the association at (717) 548-3896.

Grain Sign-Up At Halfway

YORK (York Co.) — York County crop producers have enrolled farms in record numbers for the Agricultural Marketing Transition Act (AMTA) Program.

This program provides for Production Flexibility Contracts (PFC). The PFC reflects a farm's 5-year planting history from acreage reports voluntarily filed in the county FSA office.

Producers eligible to enroll in the program are those who have a risk in producing a crop, and the farm has a crop acreage base (CAB) established.

Benefits include guaranteed cash payments and eligibility for commodity loans.

Participants must sign-up prior to July 12, 1996 for a seven-year contract.

Cropland under contract may be planted to any crop with some exceptions on fruit and vegetables. Acreage reports are optional, as is crop insurance coverage.

Conservation plans are required on all farms whether or not all farms participate. Advance payments are available upon request with final payments issued by Sept. 30, 1996.

Once again, county farmers are reminded that this is the only sign-up period for seven years and ends July 12, 1996.

Interested producers can contact the York County FSA Office at 120 Pleasant Acres Rd., Monday through Friday 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. at phone number (717) 755-2801.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in its programs on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, religion, age, disability, politicial beliefs, and marital and familial status. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs). Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communication of program information (braille, large print, audiotape, etc.) should contact the USDA, Office of Communications at (202) 720-5881 (voice) or (202) 720-7808 (TDD).

To file a complaint, write the Secretary of Agriculture, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, DC, 20250, or call (202) 720-7327 (voice) or (202) 720-1127 (TDD). USDA is an equal employment opportunity employer.

Checkoff Helps Beef Industry Introduce New Cuts

DENVER, Colo. — As part of a larger push to expand the Korean market for U.S. beef, U.S. Meat Export Federation (USMEF) officials met recently with the president of one of the world's largest beef importing organizations at USMEF's international headquarters in Denver.

Leading export companies also attended the checkoff-supported meeting with President Ki Young Kim of South Korea's Livestock Products Marketing Organization (LPMO), the government entity responsible for purchasing the majority of South Korea's beef imports.

"This was an opportunity to introduce new beef cuts and to offer a wider range of U.S. quality grades directly to President Kim," said USMEF President and CEO Philip Seng. "This effort, and our work with other purchasing groups in Korea, is part of a larger USMEF initiative to develop the Korean market for U.S. beef.

"At this stage in the development of the Korean market, it's important that we create consumer demand at the retail level for the cuts we are promoting to the Korean purchasing groups," Seng said. "We must pull U.S. beef into the market from the demand side."

South Korea is a flourishing market for the U.S. beef industry, importing 105,000 metric tons (mt) of U.S. beef and beef variety meats worth $333 million in 1995. In just two years, U.S. beef sales to Korea have more than doubled.

"We're making very good progress but the majority of U.S. beef sales in Korea consist of just two cuts," said USMEF Korea Director Brad Park, who accompanied President Kim to the USMEF seminar and on a subsequent tour of the U.S. meat industry. "For example, more than 90 percent of the U.S. beef bought by the LPMO this year has been choice grade chuck roll."

At the meeting in Denver, USMEF and USDA presentations on production practices, meat safety, grading issues and supply and demand trends were followed by a cutting and merchandising demonstration of U.S. beef cuts that USMEF believes have strong demand potential in Korea.

"We demonstrated the benefits of the shoulder clod, knuckle, brisket, and round cuts," said Park. "In addition, we reviewed for President Kim how the Korean market would benefit from LPMO purchasing the select grade of certain U.S. beef cuts."

A PROPOSED NEW UNDERGRADUATE MAJOR IN ANIMAL, DAIRY, AND POULTRY SCIENCE AT PENN STATE

W. D. Weaver, Jr.
Prof. & Head
Dept. of Poultry Science

A new effort is under way at Penn State University to develop a single undergraduate major between the departments of dairy and animal science and poultry science.

The new major would not alter the overall administrative structure of the two departments, but would rather combine the undergraduate recruiting, advising, and instructional efforts to better serve the students and the industries interested in students trained in the animal sciences.

While the proposed curriculum would maintain a science option for students interested in graduate and professional schools and other careers requiring more in-depth instruction in the biological sciences, an increased emphasis would be placed on the management and business aspects of animal production, processing, and marketing.

To aid the Curriculum Committee in its task of developing the curriculum, the two departments have commissioned a survey of recent graduates of the three animal science oriented curricula — poultry technology and management, dairy and animal science, and animal bioscience — in the College of Agricultural Sciences. The survey has been designed to assess the importance of a number of life- and career-oriented skills that students were, and in some cases possibly should have been, exposed to in the classroom while at Penn State.

Further, the survey will provide graduates with an opportunity to evaluate the effectiveness of their baccalaureate program in preparing them to perform in their chosen career fields and in society in general.

Other sections of the survey address extracurricular activities, internships and other work experiences, and student employment. In each of these sections, alumni are asked to indicate their levels of involvement and how participation (or lack of participation) impacted on their overall collegiate experience while at Penn State.

Finally, the graduates are asked to provide some general information on their first employment after graduation and on their present employment.

Who is better able to evaluate the value and relevance of an undergraduate program than recent graduates from that program who are working in the marketplace? Unfortunately, many in academia fail to realize that with undergraduate education, colleges and universities are actually producing products for a marketplace. To ensure that the needs of the marketplace are being met, academia must periodically survey the marketplace, which is represented by its recent graduates, to determine if the formal (course requirements) and extracurricular portions of the college experience are appropriate and meet student needs.

The joint Curriculum Committee from the departments of poultry science and dairy and animal science will be receiving the results from the survey later this summer, and will consider the comments from the recent graduates very carefully as it goes about developing a new curriculum for the new proposed undergraduate major of animal, dairy and poultry science.

My next article, which will appear later this summer, will summarize the results from the alumni survey. For more information, contact Bill Weaver, (814) 865-3411.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association has announced this week its annual junior dairy cattle judging schools open to all youth, regardless of dairy cattle breed affiliation.

The two-day schools help teach and prepare youth for showing and judging dairy cattle. Several different breeds are always included and type and conformation preferences are discussed.

The programs run from noon the first day until noon the next.

The cost per student is $25 for those staying overnight and includes the school cost, hotel room and an evening meal.

For those who can commute, the cost of the school and evening meal is $15.

For overnighters or commuters, a second member of the same family who attends receives a $5 discount on the cost of the school.

The deadline for reservations is June 24 and checks should be made payable to: Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Send reservations to the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801.

Each school offers at least 12 classes of animals to judge. Youth get the opportunity to judge cattle, learn about the cattle evaluation process and how to give reasons for the decisions. The school helps build knowledge and confidence, as well as establishing fellowship.

The Holstein Association annually holds two schools in Pennsylvania one for youth located in the western portion of the state, the other for youth in the east.

This year, the Holstein Club and dairy cattle community in Beaver and Lawrence counties are serving as host for the western school, July 8-9.

The teacher of the western school is to be John Burket, of East Freedom. Host farms for the school are to be the Larry Glewitz family with Brown Swiss; Paul Lawrence family with Holsteins; Dennis Musser family with Guernseys; and the Ed Byers family with Jerseys.

The Lancaster Holstein Club and dairy community is serving as host for the eastern school, July 10-11, with Lloyd Pease, of Susquehanna to serve as teacher.

Host farms are to be Lowell Brubaker family with Holsteins; David Wenger family with Holsteins; and Brown Swiss, Jerseys and Ayshire judging is to be held at the Solanco Fairgrounds in Quarryville.

For more information, call the Pa. Holstein Association at (814) 234-0364.

Frederick Team Wins Md. Envirothon

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — A team of five students from Middletown High School in Frederick County recently beat out teams from 22 counties and Baltimore City to win its second straight Maryland Envirothon, an annual two-day outdoor natural resources competition for high school students. This year's event was held May 16-18 at the Grove Point Girl Scout Camp on the Sassafras River in Cecil County.

Team members Elaine Bucheimer, Natalie Bucheimer, Crissi Gamache, Jennifer Morat, Erin Weber, Lara Wise, and Tara Harrell returned this year to defend their 1995 title. They were coached by science instructor Ron Albaugh and Barry Burch, a planner with the Frederick and Catoctin soil conservation districts.

Established in 1991, the objectives of the Maryland Envirothon are twofold — to test students' environmental knowledge and understanding of state resource issues and to instill a desire to learn more about the natural world. Since its inception, the program has grown from 250 students to more than 1,000 students this year. The competition is sponsored by the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation Districts and the State Soil Conservation Committee.

The Frederick team will now go on to represent Maryland at the National Envirothon competition slated for July 29 in Ashland, Neb. More than 30 teams from the United States, Canada, and Mexico are expected to participate in the national competition.

"The Envirothon is an excellent educational program for students," said Maryland Agriculture Secretary Lewis Riley.

"The program gets students out of the classroom and into the natural world where they learn first-hand from the experts about how to build a soil profile to determine the health of a stream.

"Our Envirothon really prepares students to become leaders in agricultural and other natural resource-related fields," he said.

The Maryland Envirothon is held once a year at an outdoor environmental education center. Students taking part in the competition have been studying Maryland's natural resources for the past year in hopes of winning.

Working in teams of five (with two alternates), students are trained and tested in four natural resources areas including soil, aquatics, forestry, and wildlife, plus a current environmental issue that changes from year to year. This year's issue was "greenways."

The students, who hail from virtually every region in the state, rotate through the various test stations where they are asked to identify and categorize living resources, perform soil surveys, and solve other complex natural resource issues. The team with the highest cumulative total wins the competition and the opportunity to represent Maryland at the Natural Envirothon.

At the 1996 competition, the Frederick team scored 430 points out of a possible 500. They were followed by teams from Harford (426 points), Montgomery (406.5 points), Baltimore (405.5 points), Kent (399.5 points), and St. Mary's counties (396 points).

The first Envirothon competition was held in Pennsylvania in 1979. Since then, more than 30 states, Canada, and Australia have embraced the program and send teams to the national competition in late summer.

Farmedic Receives Resolution

ALFRED, N.Y. — Recently, during its Farmedic Instructor Training course at the Farmedic National Training Center located at Alfred State College, the Farmedic program was presented a Legislative Resolution by Senator Randy Kuhl, chairman of the New York Senate Agricultural Committee.

This resolution commended the Farmedic Program upon the occasion of its 15th Anniversary.

The resolution praised the Farmedic National Training Center located at Alfred State College in training more than 10,000 emergency providers from across the country to be more knowledgeable of farm rescue procedures, and acknowledged Farmedic's success at reducing death and injury from farm accidents, reducing the probability of injury or death to the rescuers, and enhancing the awareness and cooperation between agricultural, fire, rescue and EMS communities.

Key members of the Farmedic team — Executive Director Dave Hill, co-founder Ted Halpin, lead instructor Dave Oliver, and senior instructor Rich Hoffman — were acknowledged for traveling to 46 states and Canada to train rescuers.

PRUA Selects Dr. Wilson Executive Director

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals, an affiliation of animal user groups, has selected Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University as its new executive director.

PRUA has over 25 different affiliated organizations which use animals either in agriculture, recreation, as wildlife, and in other ways that benefit society.

Some of the programs sponsored by PRUA and its affiliates are the providing of educational materials to primary and secondary schools, distributing of "I CARE" materials dealing with the ethics of exhibiting livestock at shows by youth, responding to questions and citicisms about animal welfare, care and use, the "Hunters Sharing The Harvest" program, the Responsible Use of Animals Conference, and other activities.

Wilson replaces Mr. Ken Brandt, who has been executive director of PRUA for the past five years. Mr. Brandt will continue the conduct of the Hunters Sharing The Harvest program which facilitates the contribution of venison from hunters, through cooperating meat processing plants, to Food Banks throughout Pennsylvania. This program is sponsored primarily by the United States Tobacco Corp., as well as other sponsors such as the Blue Mountain Chapter of the Safari Club, Intl.

According to Bob Junk, president of PRUA, "We are delighted that Dr. Wilson will work more closely with PRUA and also that Ken Brandt will continue association with the Hunters Sharing The Harvest program.

PRUA has just completed a very successful, and informative conference on the Responsible Use of Animals, which was particularly worthwhile because it advanced communication between animal users and those who are concerned more about the well-being of animals than the actual contribution of animals.

Those of us who have worked closely with PRUA over the past few years are planning many more activities that will benefit not only the users of animals but also the animals themselves."

Dr. Wilson will continue on the faculty at Penn State University, and has been active for many years in perceptions and education programs about animal agriculture, veal and dairy-beef systems research, use of growth promotants to enhance efficiency and rate of growth, and in the utilization of forages and crop byproducts in animal production systems. Recently he has initiated research and education efforts on the impact of agriculture on the environment.

Dr. Wilson has authored over 100 scientific, peer-reviewed and over 450 industry articles, and has made presentations in 18 countries and most states. He has also served as a consultant to several beef, dairy, veal and animal welfare groups.

PRUA accepts both individual and affiliated association and company memberships. The address and phone number of Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals is 862 Webster Drive, State College, PA 16801; phone/fax is (814) 238-5888.

Hanson Appointed Extension Assistant Director

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Dr. Jim Hanson, associate professor in the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics at the University of Maryland at College Park's (UMCP) College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, has been appointed assistant director for agriculture and natural resources of the college's cooperative extension service. Hanson assumed his new duties on June 1.

"Dean Fretz and I are confident that Jim is the correct person for this job," said Dr. James C. Wade, associate dean and associate director for extension, in announcing the appointment. "His experience, attitudes, and philosophies will help to ensure the continuing development of a strong Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. We appreciate his willingness to take on this important leadership role."

Hanson earned two degrees at UMCP: a bachelor's degree in agronomy and a doctorate in agricultural economics. He also received a master's in plant breeding and genetics from the University of Minnesota.

Hanson was appointed regional farm management specialist for the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service in June 1988. Since that time he has been instrumental in the success of three major extension projects: the Southern Maryland Regional Farmers' Market, the Mid-Atlantic Produce Project, and the Profitable Agriculture and Clean Environment (PACE) program. His work earned him the Excellence In Extension Award from the UMCP College of Agriculture Alumni Chapter in 1993 and the Distinguished Extension Program Award from the American Agricultural Economics Association in 1994.

Pa.DHIA New York Technicians

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The service area of Pa. DHIA continues to grow. Recently Pa. DHIA hired two technicians to accommodate the positive growth from the New York area.

Jim LaClair and Steve Crowley completed all required training which includes a five-day field training seminar held in State College.

Jim LaClair is currently testing herds on a regular basis as well as substituting for other technicians in times of sickness or vacations.

He graduated from St. Lawrence Central High School and attended Cobleskill for two years with a major in Liberal Arts. Upon completion of college he worked for a contractor building pole barns.

While growing up he belonged to 4-H and FFA. He served as president of the 4-H club for four years and FFA local chapter for one year.

Steve Crowley is currently testing herds in Potter County and the New York area. When asked what he likes most about the job, Steve is quick to state, "Meeting new people, helping the farmer meet his needs and working with farmers on improvement of their dairy herds."

Steve comes to Pa. DHIA with technician experience, having worked with Northeast DHI. He also worked as a herdsman in Minnesota with a herd of 300 cows.

He is an Eastern member and has owned his own dairy farm which consisted of 80 cows. Steve is currently responsible for 33 herds which consist of 2,500 cows.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — It's not a lunar eclipse or a new comet streaking across the sky, although it is something that happens only once in 17 years.

It's not something particularly frightening to a farmer and doesn't have any earth-shattering implications for those who care for livestock or horticultural crops.

But the 17-year periodical cicadas are back.

The what?

That's right. The long-legged, big-winged insects that make a sort of extended, slicing, chirping sound in the trees on summer evenings aren't the infamous locusts that people sometimes mistake them for. They're simply called cicadas (pronounced si-KAY-das).

That particular rasping sound identifies them. But why the sound?

According to Dr. Tim Elkner, Lancaster County extension agent, the sound you hear is the male mating call, trying to attract females for egg laying.

Both male and female 17-year cicadas measure about 1¼ long. They are similar to the more common annual cicadas, the Dogday Harvestflies, which are actually larger, measuring up to about 1¼ inches, according to Elkner.

There are actually about six species of periodical cicadas, three with a 17-year cycle and three with a 13-year cycle.

"The concern that farmers may have is that the eggs are buried in smaller branches, actually the twigs of the tree, where they could cause some damage," said Elkner. That could be a concern for orchardists with younger trees.

What happens is that the female, using the blades of a saw-like device on her abdomen, cuts several small pockets in the bark of a twig before depositing 400-600 eggs.

This process can cause small limbs or seedlings to wilt and may provide an opening for disease. The adults live only about four weeks above ground. But the twig injury they cause may be apparent for several years.

Periodical cicadas are sometimes called nature's pruners, since they cause the death of small branches on trees.

But for the older, larger oak trees and such, the only concern would be that, once the eggs hatch, the larvae burrow underground and literally feed off the roots. Cicada nymphs spend 17 years from 2-24 inches underground, sucking nutrients from plant roots.

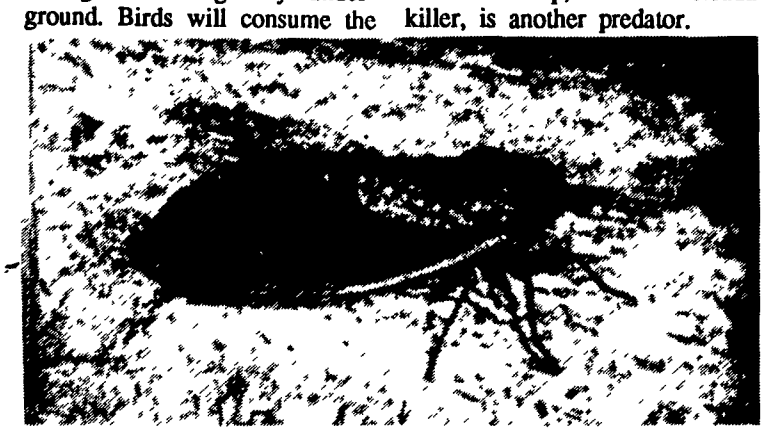
The larvae actually stay underground for 17 years!

On some occasions, the adult cicada sucks flud from small twigs but does not feed on leaves.

The adult cicadas are clumsy fliers, often colliding with objects in flight.

The sound they make is their most distinctive call, and occurs from dawn until dusk.

Cicadas are completely harmless to humans, don't bite or sting, and are not poisonous. They have natural enemies, however — moles eat the immature cicadas during their long stay underground. Birds will consume the adults. A wasp, called the cicada killer, is another predator.



Both male and female 17-year cicadas measure about 1¼ long. They are similar to the more common annual cicadas, the Dogday Harvestflies, which are actually larger, measuring up to about 1¼ inches, according to Elkner. There are actually about six species of periodical cicadas, three with a 17-year cycle and three with a 13-year cycle.

Teen Challenge Helps Addicts Turn Their Lives Around

describing his experiences. Without Teen Challenge, he admitted that "I was bad, like the guys you read about in the paper. Without Teen Challenge, I would be dead of AIDS or violence."

Clancy is one of many who think the same about Teen Challenge.

The Teen Challenge Training Center began with eight men in a farmhouse on a dairy farm in Rehrersburg in July 1962. It was the result of Rev. David Wilkerson's efforts, who left a small town pastorate in Pennsylvania to pioneer work among street gangs and drug addicts in New York City.

Eventually a film, entitled "The Cross and the Switchblade," was made to tell about the beginnings of this worldwide ministry.

Funded through churches of all denominations, businesses, civic groups, and concerned individuals, the center encompasses about 350 acres, including an educational wing, dormitory areas, an office building, and shops housing more than 20 different vocational trades. Housed on the premises, along with a library, classrooms, and offices includes a print shop, auto body, and auto mechanic shops. There are also construction and industrial shops in addition to six greenhouses.

The youth, all men ranging in age from 18-60, are trained on the premises in a wide variety of vocations.

Importantly, there is also a horticultural farm which is home to several acres of strawberries and vine crops, according to Eric Hole, farm manager.

Including rented acreage, there are about 350 tillable acres, in addition to some pasture and woodland. On the tillable acres, the program's youth take care of four acres of strawberries, one acre of peppers, one of tomatoes, in addition to a half acre of watermelons. Other crops include 150 acres of alfalfa and other grasses, 100 acres of corn, 20 acres of barley, and 30 acres of beans.

In early April this year, a dispersal auction was held, which sold all the milking cows. The center has quit the dairy business except for some heifers which are raised on a contract basis.

Those who come to the farm are selected based on interviews conducted at any of several induction centers. Clancy entered Teen Challenge through the Germantown induction center near Philadelphia. Others come from many cities, including Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, or Baltimore.

Hole said, "Of the guys I have talked to over the years, I would bet probably 80 percent of the guys are from a broken home of some sort or another.

"It's amazing that it's such a wide cross-section of society from which guys end up here. There are guys here from very well-to-do families, others who went to a dozen different (secular) rehab places, those one- or two-month 'instant cures' that just don't work for several thousand dollars.

"And we have guys that show up here with the clothes on their back. That's all they got to their name. Some are sleeping out who knows where, in a little old car, van, building, whatever. We have the full gamut and everything in between."

Those who sign up have to make a decision: how serious or how desperate are they to really make a change in their life?

Hole said, "If they really want to change, all the things are here to give them to be able to see that happen."

Altogether, according to the farm manager, the farm "has always been a positive thing to help generate some revenue to help keep the training center going here." The decision came last December by the board planning committee to discontinue the dairy and increase support for the horticulture center, which includes six greenhouses.

The nursery stock has increased dramatically, with the addition of several greenhouses in the past few years. The houses grow a wide variety of bedding and vegetable plants. The plants are sold through the Kutztown Production Auction, Leesport, and other retail and wholesale outlets.

Strawberries were planted for the first time two years ago. This year, four acres of strawberries formed the backbone of a lot of early morning work for about 90 at the center.

This year, varieties of tomatoes and peppers are being grown to see how viable they'll be at the auctions.

The operation remains nonprofit, according to Hole. "We're trying to support ourselves as much as we can to do the job that is out there to be done."

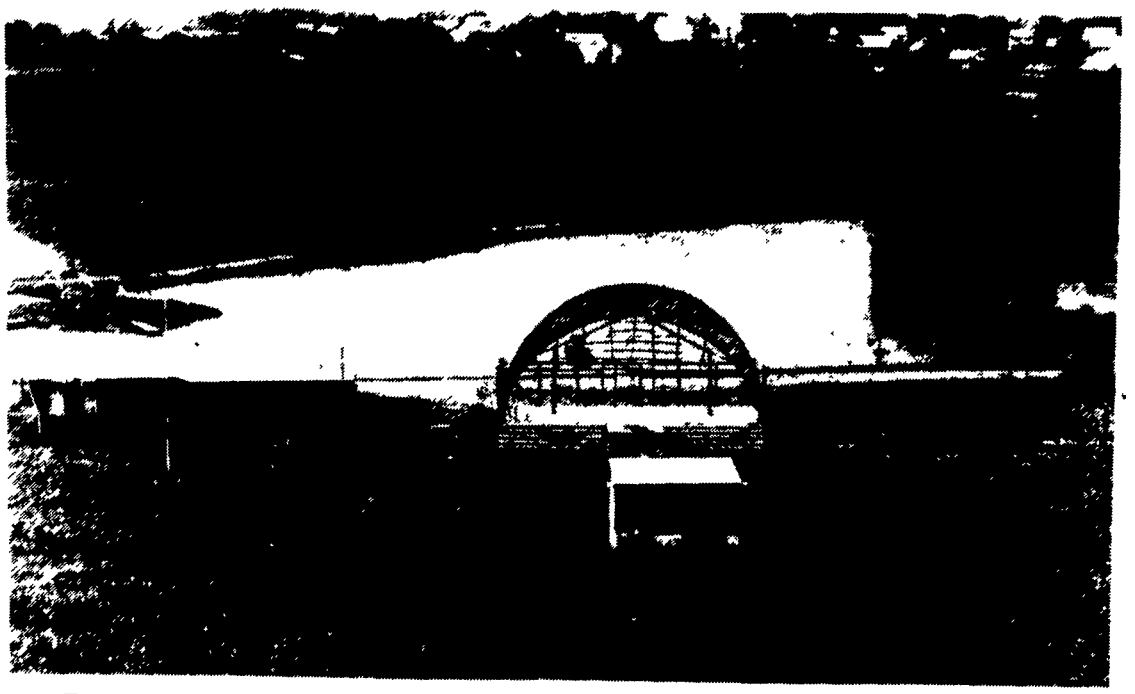
Classes in the Bible and Christian beliefs, money management, family relationships, including a solid work ethic, round out the experience for those who attend Teen Challenge.

"We use biblical principles to teach the work habits and the life skills that they're going to need. That makes the difference between our type of program and others, and we give that credit for the success rate versus other state-funded rehabilitation programs," he said.

Hole provided information on a study that proved that the success rate for Teen Challenge was 86 percent — those who went five years or more without having to reenter a drug and alcohol rehab program.

(Turn to Page A29)

In all, there are about 350 tillable acres, in addition to some pasture and woodland, at the Teen Challenge farm. On the tillable acres, the program's youth take care of four acres of strawberries, one acre of peppers, one of tomatoes, in addition to a half acre of watermelons. Other crops include 150 acres of alfalfa and other grasses, 100 acres of corn, 20 acres of barley, and 30 acres of beans.



Every year, alumni of the training center meet for a three-day celebration of what the program has meant to them. It's called Celebrate, and will be held this year from July 12-14 on the grounds of the training center.

Teen Challenge Helps Addicts Turn Their Lives Around

According to Ralph Chapin, building, grounds, and vocational administrator, those who enter the program with skills "have the best chance of getting jobs when they leave the program.

"We're probably better at helping them learn how to handle life, how to become productive in life," he said. Chapin said that some will pick up skills as part of the training program in electricity, plumbing, painting, auto body, and other trade basics. Other trades include carpentry, printing, and other small shop work.

Chapin said that the program could do a lot more for those who sign up "if we had second-phase training" beyond the eight months of program membership. That way, the school could provide further trade school services that could result in greater job placement.

For now, "We provide the atmosphere for the person to develop in, depending on how he applies himself," said Chapin.

"We like to see them go out of here wanting to be a success in life, not being troubled by the ups and downs that there are," said Hole. "It's important they know there are good times, they're bad times, but you know, you can get through those times if you set your focus on the right things.

"We like to see them go out of there in victory, going out and not being downcast or depressed, or dismayed, but with a good, positive outlook, knowing that they can make it," he said. "They've got everything they need to make it when they leave here."

Every year, alumni of the training center meet for a three-day celebration of what the program has meant to them. It's called Celebrate, and will be held this year from July 12-14 on the grounds of the training center.

Featured guests included Rev. David Wilkerson on Friday, July 12; Bishop John Gimenez, on Saturday, July 13; and Selena, on Saturday, July 13. There will be ministry teams and other groups singing and performing dramatic skits. Saturday night features fireworks. A lot of other events are scheduled to accommodate the 2,500 graduates that are expected to attend.

Hole is convinced of the validity of the program, based on the positive experiences of those who have graduated. "We think we've found the answer," he said. "We know we have, personally."

'Without Teen Challenge, I would be dead of AIDS or violence.'

'We're probably better at helping them learn how to handle life, how to become productive in life.'

There are also construction and industrial shops in addition to six greenhouses at Teen Challenge.

Farm Tour June 28

DANVILLE (Montour Co.) — The conservation districts of the Pocono Northeast RC & D Area and the Keystone Chapter, Soil and Water Conservation Society are sponsoring a farm tour on Friday, June 28 at Dave Jackson's Kiwi Korners, located between Danville and Syndertown.

Kiwi Korners has the distinction of being the largest acreage of successfully fruiting winter hardy kiwi in the U.S. Nearly a decade of research and development has been conducted on 31 different cultivars to determine those best suited to Pennsylvania.

The event will begin at noon with a project overview, followed by a picnic lunch featuring foods prepared with kiwi puree. A walking tour of the nine-acre kiwi plantation will follow as will demonstrations of conservation equipment and methods.

Demonstrations will include compost production using a self-propelled windrow turner, no-till vegetable transplanting, soil aeration using the Council's AerWay, and a tillage demonstration using a rotary spading machine. All the experts will be on hand to explain and answer questions.

This farm tour is the finale of a two-day conference which begins on Thursday, June 27 at Bloomsburg University. The conference will focus on the health or condition of our farmland soils. University researchers and USDA experts will present information on a variety of topics including ecological soil management, composting for waste management and plant disease suppression, and the interrelationships between plants and soil fauna to soil health. These technical sessions begin at 9:15 a.m. and will end around 5 p.m.

A registration fee of $15 each day includes lunch and all refreshments. For more information or to preregister, contact the Pocono Northeast RC&D Office at 395 Bedford Street, Clarks Summit, PA 18411, (717) 586-1019.

June Dairy Month

The Use Of Marketing Boards To Expand Exports

RONALD D. KNUTSON

Materially increased interest has developed in the potential usefulness of marketing boards as a means of expanding the exports of dairy products.

In fact, the passage of the 1996 Farm Bill included a mandate for the USDA to assist the U.S. dairy industry in creating one or more export companies.

According to the Farm Bill, "The secretary (of agriculture) shall, consistent with the World Trade Organization (which administers the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade), provide necessary advice and assistance to the U.S. dairy industry to establish and maintain one or more trading companies for the purpose of facilitating international market development and exports of dairy products."

But even without that, this increased interest in developing a New Zealand-type dairy board comes from several issues:

- Reductions in support levels have made U.S. butter and nonfat dry milk prices more nearly competitive in international markets. As a result, the potential for export has been enhanced.
- Questions have arisen regarding the legality under GATT of the proposed "self-help" plan, which called for the establishment of assessments for producers who increased production and the use of those assessments to dispose of products on the world market.
- Questions have also arisen regarding the potential for increased competition from foreign dairy products within U.S. domestic markets resulting from reductions in the effectiveness of Section 22 provisions under the GATT tariffication policy. The spirit of GATT indicates that the long-run level of tariff protection may be gradually reduced, forcing the U.S. dairy industry to operate in an international market environment.
- The effectiveness of DEIP as an export enhancement tool has demonstrated the effectiveness of market promotion in expanding markets. Yet, the GATT outcome mandates reductions in export subsidies through programs such as DEIP.
- Concern has arisen that the U.S. dairy industry, despite being the largest of any nation, has not been a significant factor in the world market except in periods when the CCC has been willing to subsidize exports through either direct sales, under programs such as DEIP, or during unusual periods such as 1988-1989 when world nonfat dry milk supplies became short. This concern was highlighted in a recent GAO report titled Dairy Industry: Potential for and Barriers to Market Development.
- Philosophically, the United States' policy has changed in the direction of favoring market solutions to problems and more direct exposure of producers to market forces.

The purpose of this article is to explore the potential consequences of utilizing a marketing board to export dairy products. This approach is employed by the New Zealand Dairy Board (NZDB). Therefore, the leaflet begins with a description of the NZBD. It then proceeds to describe alternate ways a comparable structure might fit into the U.S. dairy industry. It ends by pointing out areas of compatibility and conflict with U.S. dairy policy, the impact on the world dairy market, and the spirit of the GATT accord.

New Zealand Dairy Board

The NZDB is the exclusive exporter for the New Zealand dairy industry. It markets the products manufactured from 85-90 percent of New Zealand's milk production.

New Zealand generally is recognized as being the lowest cost producer of milk in the world. While producing only about 1.5 percent of the world's milk supply (roughly equivalent to California's production), New Zealand has an export share of approximately 25 percent of the world's market.

The New Zealand Dairy Board is a quasi-government corporation in that it is explicitly created under statutory law, giving it exclusive export authority. It is governed by 13 board members, 11 of whom are directors of New Zealand's cooperatives and two of whom are appointed by the government.

The 11 cooperative NZDB members are elected by their approximately 17 cooperatives whose votes are based on the volume of their members' production.

As the sole exporter of 85-90 percent of the nation's milk production, the NZDB is in a unique position to guide the products manufactured by the cooperatives.

It does this through a differential system of premiums and penalties designed to encourage the manufacture of products forecast to be in greatest export demand and discourage those that are in surplus.

In other words, it adjusts the quantity of manufactured products processed through its own internal pricing system. Payments are made to the cooperatives on the 20th day of the month following purchase in the form of an advance price which is adjusted regularly according to market conditions.

Before the pool is closed, final payments are made to the cooperative to reflect the differential premiums and penalties for specific products during the course of the season.

The NZDB places a high priority on exports of branded and specialty products which constitute about 35 percent of its product mix. The development of this market, which has been a major goal, is dependent on integration of product research, processing, quality control, transportation, packaging, and shipping.

In other words, the NZDB has substantial influence on what, when, and how the product is produced.

The NZDB operates in the world dairy market through a network of wholly-owned subsidiaries, joint ventures, affiliated, and associated companies. These companies deal in New Zealand dairy products as well as other New Zealand products, and the products of other countries. For example, the NZDB has imported European cheese into the United States.

The NZDB is not without controversy. Some New Zealand cooperatives have, from time to time, desired to export on their own. Moreover, New Zealand government officials have proposed removing the board's export monopoly in order that it might have a better guide to its performance in a more competitive market context.

Application To The United States

This section deals only with how an export marketing board (hereinafter USDB) might operate in the context of the U.S. dairy industry.

Issues relating to how the USDB might operate in the context of U.S. dairy policy is not discussed in detail. Rather, the focus is on the concept of a producer-controlled export agency.

Three operational alternatives for the USDB will be discussed:

- Exclusive exporter.
- Nonexclusive exporter.
- Clearing house for exports.

Each of these options will be discussed without the USDB having the power to control production. A broader array of marketing board and "self-help" concepts are discussed in leaflet P-15.

Exclusive Exporter

A USDB could be authorized as the exclusive exporter of U.S. dairy products by the U.S. Congress, making the board a government-sanctioned monopoly.

This would mean that no other cooperative or proprietary firms would be allowed to make export sales without the approval or involvement of the USDB.

Opposition could be anticipated from companies that are currently involved in the dairy product export business, from companies anticipating becoming involved, or from companies who see a dairy board as an undesirable precedence for similar developments in other commodities.

Some of this opposition from within the dairy industry might be stifled by the potential for current exporters becoming joint ventures, affiliates or associates with the dairy board. Opposition might also be curbed by limiting USDB exclusive export authority to certain products — such as manufactured hard products and their derivatives.

The USDB could be either an extension of the current dairy promotion board or an entirely separate entity. It could contract with cooperatives (or potentially proprietary processors) for the production of specific products considered to have market potential.

Payment to the cooperative would be based upon the price the USDB could obtain in the world market. The USDB could take over the functions currently performed by the CCC and the acquisition of products for domestic food assistance programs (school lunch, WIC, etc.).

While DEIP is in existence, the USDB could handle export decisions under it. In the absence of price supports, the USDB would be the exclusive interface between domestic and international markets.

An exclusive USDB would need to have the authority to establish marketing offices in other countries. Such offices may, like the NZDB, be wholly owned subsidiaries, joint ventures, or affiliates.

Such agents would have exclusive authority for handling export sales on behalf of the USDB in the country involved. Such a system would have the potential for being highly efficient in that it would be the sole U.S. operator in the export market.

It could be more competitive than current U.S. exporters in that it would have pricing authority or latitude not enjoyed by current U.S. companies operating in the export market.

Therefore, it would meet traders, such as the NZDB, on a one-for-one basis in markets such as Mexico or Japan. As the exclusive exporter, it should be in a better position to develop markets for all types of products.

If the USDB agent was not performing in a particular country, the USDB would need to have the authority to shut it down and/or switch affiliates.

The USDB would have the power to set guidelines for the terms of sale and to determine the sourcing of supply for the product.

Therefore, even if a particular cooperative or proprietary firm was awarded the exclusive USDB agency for sales in a particular country, the source of the product sold would be determined by the USDB based on competitiveness, product quality, and performance criteria.

To be effective and equitable, the USDB would have to have the authority to operate a pooling system that spreads the receipts from exporting across the entire U.S. dairy industry.

Such a mechanism could involve either a system of assessments or the operation of an export pool whereby all costs and returns from export operations would be shared equally. As a result, producer returns would be directly affected by the returns that the USDB achieves in the export market.

Nonexclusive Exporter

Without exclusive export authority, cooperatives and proprietary firms could continue to operate in the export market but would do so in competition with the USDB.

The terms of competition could be influenced by the board as a matter of policy by the board having the power to influence raw milk costs. Once again, a system would need to exist for pooling to spread costs and receipts across all producers in all markets.

In any particular country, the USDB could be selling U.S. dairy products as well as proprietary or cooperative concerns. The tradeoff would be between the influence and effectiveness of the sole exclusive agent (previous option) and the value (positive or negative) of competition and product diversity in the international marketplace.

Potentially, the USDB could end up selling only commodities to the least advantageous markets.

As indicated previously, the issue of nonexclusivity has surfaced in New Zealand. The NZDB views this option as undermining their effectiveness and efficiency. The proponents of nonexclusivity believe that competition provides a yardstick by which efficiency and performance may be most effectively judged.

Clearing House

The USDB could simply act as a clearing house for facilitating the movement of dairy products into the world market.

Such a clearing house would have promotional activities (much like the current Dairy Promotion Board). It would not be a direct sales agent.

Instead, sales would be made through proprietary and cooperative firms based on the prices paid for raw milk, their efficiency, and their performance in the export market.

The primary roles of the USDB under this option would be to promote the utilization of U.S. dairy products internationally and ensure equitable pooling arrangements.

The difference between this option and the current system is that U.S. dairy cooperatives and proprietary companies would not have their hands tied in the export market.

That is, there would be a mechanism for all producers sharing in the costs and benefits of exporting.

Relationship To U.S. Dairy Policy

The GAO, in its recent report on dairy exports, finds that the U.S. dairy industry is unable to compete in international markets for four primary reasons:

- The milk price support program maintains U.S. raw milk prices at sufficiently high levels so that manufactured products are priced out of the world market.
- The industry lacks an international market-oriented mindset and strategy. There are many possible reasons for this mindset or lack of strategy. For example, U.S. dairy firms have not had to be competitive with a relatively high milk price support (which no longer exists). Additionally, the structure of major proprietary dairy companies which have plants in most major milk-producing countries with policies designed to encourage self-sufficiency inherently discourages the development of export markets.
- Moreover, GAO finds that the NZDB has been exceedingly effective at penetrating international markets not only because of its cost advantage in producing milk, but also because of its international marketing skill — something it finds lacking in U.S. dairy cooperatives and proprietary firms. Part of the NZDB's success in international marketing lies in its ability to sell internationally at competitive prices. Therefore, the NZDB is a very effective competitor in Mexico in the face of the U.S. dairy export incentive subsidies (DEIP) and EU export restitutions. New Zealand is competitive in Mexico and in other markets because its costs are low and because it has marketing skill, but also because, as a marketing board, it has the pricing power to lower its price on sale to Mexico to meet the competition. In lowering its price, there is no explicit subsidy paid but there is an implied subsidy in that markets are being cross-subsidized to maintain them. Such pricing power is also implied by the grain marketing boards in Canada and Australia.
- The trend toward lower price supports and the developments in GATT designed to liberalize trade and guarantee market access has forced rethinking of current U.S. dairy policies and should cause U.S. dairy companies to rethink their international operational structure.

U.S. Dairy Programs And GATT

The Uruguay Round Agreement (URA) of GATT has significance for both existing U.S. dairy policies and for the operations of a USDB.

The philosophy of the URA extended into the future implies that the burden for any export price concession falls directly on producers in the form of lower product prices. Therefore, a marketing board selling in the export market at a lower price than in domestic markets is legal where producers bear the full impact of the lower price and there is no subsidy from the government.

The issues from a U.S. dairy policy perspective is whether a USDB could accomplish the same discretionary pricing power in the presence of CCC purchases under the price support program and still not violate the trade liberalization regimen of GATT.

expected, the quiet farmer's daughter took a big gamble. She left her parents, Alfred and Mary Sparling, her siblings and the family farm, Maple Flat in Troy, and moved to be near Dale.

Before they began farming together, she and Dale tried traveling the show circuit. But the perpetual road trips began to wear on Deanna. "We can go out here and work side by side, but five days in the truck and one of us would have to go stay somewhere else," Dale said with a smile.

The couple later worked together at a cattle flushing facility in nearby Frederick, Md. Before long, their thoughts turned to "the M word" and that's how Deanna ended up in a Roy Rogers restaurant one May morning, eating breakfast with the man she'd pledged her love — and the rest of her life to — just minutes before.

The celebration was short-lived — "we came home and filled silo," Dale said with a chuckle — but a weekend honeymoon trip to Atlantic City was worth the wait.

Now a 26-year-old married lady, Deanna has committed herself to her husband and her cows. She and Dale milk 62 registered and grade cows at Spungold Holsteins outside Gettysburg. They have a 21,385 rolling herd average with 740 fat, 687 protein, and 195,000 somatic cell. The herd includes one renegade Jersey who refused to adjust to the tiestalls at her owner's farm.

The couple rents their facilities from his parents, Herman and Barbara. Herman Bendig — formerly a partner with Bill Powel in Unicorn Associates of Taneytown, Md. — moved his family to the 86-acre farm next to Route 15 when his partnership with Powel was amicably dissolved.

Herman Bendig will breed cows, fix equipment, and do other jobs necessary to keep things going, but all the decisions regarding the herd are left to Dale and Deanna. "If we're going to make a mistake, we may as well do it on our own," Dale said.

They rent another 60 acres and make their own hay. Their neighbors at Getty Acres handle the corn planting and harvesting. "I couldn't afford to invest in the equipment, not for what they charge me," Dale said.

"They're great. They've helped us from day one," Deanna agreed.

The couple has made most of the dairy-related improvements on the property. Obtaining financing wasn't easy. "Both of us grew up with cows all our lives, but we didn't have a track record," Dale said. Typical agricultural lenders were less than accommodating, he said. A local bank guaranteed their loan without question, however.

Their first step was the flat parlor and 56 freestalls with mattresses for the milking string. Last fall, a trench — 18 feet by 120 feet with an 8-foot pit — was added for silage. An additional pit — 12 feet by 20 feet and four feet deep — was added to hold the brewer's grain that is a key ingredient in their total mixed ration. The Bendigs hope to add a manure pit this fall — a cost-share project with the local Farm Service Agency office.

They pay just as much attention to how they milk their cows. The Bendigs adhere as closely as possible to their 5:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. milking schedule.

On a recent evening, a cool breeze blew through the parlor and country music played in the background as the cows eased calmly in and out of the headlocks. All of the cows at Spungold are named because "that way I can remember them," Dale said.

Milkers are dipped into a bucket of bleach water as they come off one cow before they're put on the next one. The extra care is an effort to keep bacteria counts low. Somatic cell reached an all-time low of 95,000 in April, Dale said.

Deanna and a friend started their regular summer clipping of the milking string in early May. "Some people think that's foolish, but for us it makes more milk," she explained.

She's usually found in the barn for both daily shifts. Dimpled with a gentle manner and disarming smile, it's easy to see why the cows move so quietly when Deanna's in the parlor. She is ably assisted by part-time farmhand and neighbor John Eyler, who stops in after school. Her father-in-law also helps in the barn.

Dale milks too, but continues to hire out as a herdsman for other people's show strings. He attended some spring shows this year and expects to work some sales this summer, helping Norman Hill of NH Cattle Co., among others. "What would be most people's spare time is when I work on a show or a sale," Dale said.

The schedule has some benefit for Deanna, because "if I have to milk too often, I dry off cows," he said.

The milk cows are fed a round bale of hay every day, along with free choice timothy. The TMR fed before and after milking is an eight-pound ration mix of alfalfa haylage, corn silage, chopped alfalfa, cottonseed, and brewer's grain. Dale is a big proponent of the brewer's grain, which is brought to the farm from Baltimore, Md. It takes the cows a short time to adjust to the taste, he said. "But once a cow's used to it, if you run out and don't have it to put in the mix, they want to know where it's at," he said.

In addition to their milk herd, the Bendigs average about 10 dry cows, 13 bred heifers, 20 or so heifers between six months and a year, and five or six heifer calves. They have five bulls of varying ages.

Expanding their herd is not in their plans. "We don't want to milk any more cows. I don't want to be a mass producer of milk,' Dale said.

That's where the marketing comes in. "I like to sell," Dale admitted. "And I sell 'em quicker than Deanna would." The Bendigs have a number of award winning cows in their string. They've exhibited cattle at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis. In fact, they don't breed cows to calve during that time just so they can make the annual trip and make the work at home easier on whoever fills in.

Each has shown cattle in a number of states. Last year, they had the reserve grand champion and reserve junior champion at the South Mountain Fair. Their All-Pennsylvania junior yearling, Laverne, was first in her class this year at the state Spring Show.

The Bendigs have sold their genetically-correct offspring to farms around the country through contacts Dale made when he was fitting and trucking cattle. "We have show cows and index cows and they're bred to stay in those categories," Dale explained.

Their prized cow at the moment, Woodside Manor SW Kathy-ET, spends her nights in a box stall because that's what she seems to prefer. With two records over 30,000 pounds and a projection of 34,000 pounds this year, Kathy certainly has the production to warrant special treatment.

But she's also sired three bull calves that the Bendigs have sold to breeding cooperatives for quite a nice price. In addition, Kathy has four daughters who've all proven themselves worthy of their great genes. After she makes her record this fall, Kathy will be flushed in hopes of more lucrative offspring.

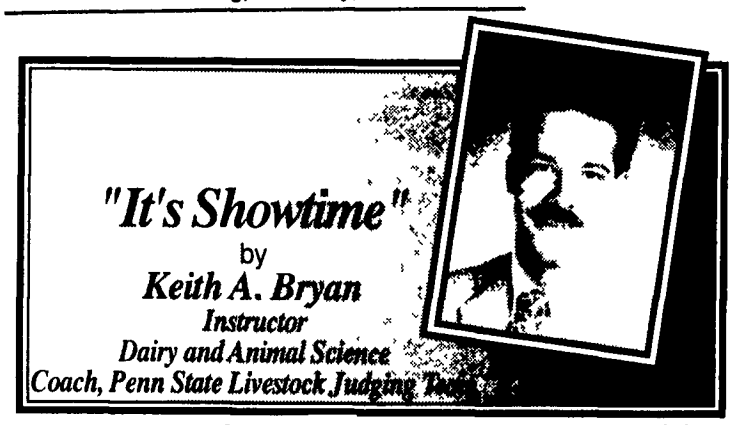
Flushing and the resulting embryo transplant are key in order for the Bendigs to increase their income, Dale said. Improving upon the quality of stock they sell is as important as boosting the quantity of heifers that leave Spungold, he said.

"It's tough out there and you've got to be a manager," he said. He also worries a lot about the demise of the small farm "because as everyone gets larger, it will make it harder for our herd to compete."

Deanna Bendig washes up after the evening milking at Spungold Holsteins in Gettysburg. She is the third generation of farm wives in her family. Deanna and her husband, Dale, met while showing cows when she was just a teenager.

Sheba is flanked by her owners, Deanna and Dale Bendig of Spungold Holsteins outside Gettysburg. The young couple rent the property from his parents.

Deanna Bendig takes a moment to check the heifers at Spungold Holsteins outside Gettysburg. She and her husband, Dale, usually have about 15 bred-heifers on hand. The registered cows are used for breeding and the grade cows to carry the embryo transfers.



BY DEFINITION . . .

There are chapters in every life which are seldom read and certainly not aloud. — Carol Shields

During the last few months, I have had the good fortune to write some articles for Lancaster Farming. Some of these articles had substance, some were opinion, and others were intended as "food for thought" for your reading enjoyment.

If you are like me, probably the last thing you want to do is read an article where the author consistently uses words that are beyond your normal vocabulary.

Sometimes we can derive the meaning of these words simply by the context in which they are used; sometimes we think we know the meaning of certain words, but are unsure; and still other times I find myself puzzled as to the message that the author is trying to convey.

Regardless of the particular situation, I am as reluctant as the next person to find a dictionary and determine the meaning of a word, but I eventually find the word anyway.

In the coming weeks and months, I may use some of the following words in articles, so I want to make sure that I understand them before I use them. My hope is that all of us may understand them better. So, by definition . . .

The Use Of Marketing Boards

Avoiding government subsidies under the purchase program may require that CCC operations either be eliminated or be transferred to the USDB.

The question is whether such a transfer of authority is politically feasible. However, recent trends in U.S. dairy policy placing greater emphasis in covering program costs by assessments is consistent with the spirit of URA policies under GATT.

Federal milk marketing order programs could be expected to encounter fewer problems under GATT within a USDB structure. As a program that facilitates classified pricing and distributes the proceeds to producers uniformly in the form of a blend price, marketing orders are GATT legal.

Orders could provide the means for accomplishing uniform distribution of the costs of exporting at competitive prices. This could be accomplished through the establishment of a separate price class for milk products exported.

A possible necessary modification could involve producers paying for the full cost of Dairy Division/AMS/USDA operations. Alternatively, the order administration function could be transferred to the USDB.

Concluding Remarks

This issue paper has attempted to clarify the options for the operation of a New Zealand-type dairy board in the United States. Whether such a producer-controlled export agency would be politically acceptable in the United States is, itself, an interesting question. Would representation of proprietary processors or consumers make a USDB any more acceptable?

As the Uruguay Round of GATT is implemented, pressures on the U.S. dairy industry to chart a course allowing the industry to be export competitive will intensify.

If the Uruguay Round GATT agreement is fully implemented, the next GATT Round, which begins around the turn of the century, can be expected to make even greater strides in the direction of trade liberalization — perhaps severely undermining Section 22 import restraints into the U.S.

The USDB concept is one of several means by which the U.S. dairy industry could become more effectively involved in export marketing.

Other means such as cooperative marketing agencies in common have been suggested.

It is time for the dairy industry to think through its policy adjustment strategy. Where does the industry want to be 10 years from now and how does it get there?

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY TO HOLD MEETING ON PESTICIDES PROTECTION

Growers, Workers & Other Pesticides Users Urged To Attend

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is encouraging the public's participation in a public meeting on federal regulations which call for the protection of employees who use pesticides at work. Work Protection Standard (WPS) regulations are in place to protect employees on farms, forests, nurseries and greenhouses from the chance of pesticide poisonings and injuries on the job. EPA has set up the meeting to hear from those people directly impacted by WPS regulations. Employers, workers and other interested persons are urged to attend.

Worker Protection Standard
Public Meeting
June 26, 1996 - 7 p.m.
Biglerville High School
North Main Street
Biglerville, PA

From 5-7 p.m. people can register and speak one-on-one with EPA and State officials before the open public meeting.

EPA will be asking for public comment and concerns on the following topics:

* Understanding Worker Protection Standard requirements
* Suggestions to improve implementation
* Success/Difficulties in implementing the requirements
* Available assistance on the WPS

EPA will use input from the public meeting to develop strategies for improving the administration of the WPS

Wayne County Preserves 10 Farms

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Ten farm owners have sold conservation easements to Wayne County and the State of Pennsylvania. These farms, involving 1770 acres, can only be used for agricultural purposes.

Eligible farms are scored and reviewed by the Wayne County Agricultural Land Preservation Board. The highest scoring farm is then recommended to the Pennsylvania Land Preservation Board for purchase of an easement. Statewide, there are 595 farms consisting of 74,188 acres in the program.

Wayne County Conservation Easement applications for this year are due in the Wayne County Extension Service Office by July 1, 1996. For more information, contact Ed Pruss at (717) 253-5970 ext. 239.

ADC, Dairy Partnership Network Use Bay Trip To Discuss Strategy

from the Dairy Network Partnership, a group of people consisting of representatives from Rodale Institute, PASA, CBF, Penn State Extension, the EPA and ADC.

The group met for the first time last July and, according to Lori Sandman, with Rodale, and Les Lanyon, with Penn State Extension, an effort has been underway to create a financial reward program for dairy producers whose farming practices are environmentally sound and maintained.

The program idea is to get as close as possible to a direct consumer-producer relationship of financial reward.

The basic theory is that consumers will not only select a product of equal value over another if that product carries with it the promise of helping to protect the environment, but that the consumer will pay slightly more for it, because it has an environmental enhancement value.

Examples of existing products and product lines whose company promotions have marketed them in association with environmental stewardship were discussed.

Lanyon talked about how Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream have associated themselves with helping the survivability of the family farmer, and also, through flavor names, with environmental concern.

He also talked about people's selections of products, and apparent willingness to pay more for them, that advertise such things as being kosher foods, natural foods, etc.

Small, almost unnoticeable logos, or seals (such as the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval, Underwriter's Laboratories, USDA approved, and registered with the Pa. Dept. of Ag) have been used for years in United States to distinguish products and sway consumer choice.

One product Lanyon displayed even touted its milk as imported from Lancaster County — a tact that relies on the general public's tourism affections and Lancaster County's reputation for plain people who portray wholesomeness.

The reason for the involvement by ADC is that through a cooperative, a promotional, labeling and over-retail price program would probably have a better chance of success with the general public than with a private processor, but private enterprise isn't ruled out.

The other reason is that ADC controls a large portion of the milk in the Middle Atlantic States and that produced in the Susquehanna River drainage of the Chesapeake watershed.

The concept is defined further in the assumption that an environmentally concerned consumer would be willing to pay an incremental amount more for the milk they purchase and that extra amount would then be allocated back in direct compensation to dairy farmers who practice good stewardship.

Rating dairy producer environmental stewardship would possibly be done by the cooperative's milk inspectors in addition to other inspection actions they take and record.

A rating card has tentatively been devised that would rate the amount of best management practices used by a producer.

It is also considered that, given public support and funding, that some of the money could be used to help dairy producers, otherwise reluctant to enter into cost-share agreements with government, design and construct facilities or changes to their operations that limit the effect of the dairy on the environment.

Lanyon and others said that part of the concern is that while efforts have been underway to increase environmental stewardship through cost-sharing for manure storage, stream fencing, cattle crossings and other practices, that doing so does not necessarily increase the profitability of the farm.

Further, there are many small streams running through farms that are contributors of sediment, perhaps the biggest threat to the entire river and bay system. Sediment smothers aquatic life, including oysters, but even closer to home, it destroys the ability of small waterways to sustain beneficial aquatic life, such as sport and edible fishes.

Those whose farming operations depend on rented farmland also have no inherint incentive to install protective measures, and landowners leasing farmland are provided no market incentive for doing so.

A survey was reportedly mailed recently to ADC farmers requesting their thoughts on what was important and what additional information they wanted to know.

Blake Glaeser, captain of the Stanley Norman, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's educational vessel, sits on a boat hatch cover and, using detailed map talks about the bay and its character which makes it unique among the Earth's estuaries.

Education via a short cruise in the Chesapeake Bay on the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's skipjack sailboat is a hands-on experience. Here fingers touch the leathery shell of a small blue crab in recent post-molt — also called the soft-shell stage.

Included was a list of references.

While there is an effort to continue farm-based education and farmer-to-farmer efforts, and an effort to evaluate current cost-share programs, surveys are also

He blames human greed for destroying most of the oyster beds in the bay, along with pollution from adjoining cities and large urban sprawl along tributary waterways.

Fall Classic Nov. 16

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Penn State Dairy Science Club and the Pennsylvania Holstein Association will team up to sponsor the 13th annual Nittany Lion Fall Classic Consignment Sale on Saturday, Nov. 16.

In addition to a strong Holstein lineup, this year's sale will again include 12-15 high quality Jerseys. The Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club is also supporting the sale.

Last year's sale averaged $1,569 on 65 Holsteins. The 12 Jerseys in last year's sale averaged $1,950. This year's sale committee is looking forward to the 1996 Fall Classic Sale. The sale managers and selection committee will be visiting Holstein and Jersey breeders in the next few months to select cattle.

The goal of this year's sale is to select about 65-70 top quality springing Holstein heifers and young Holstein cows. A select group of pedigreed calves will be sold. The club plans to select 12 to 15 top pedigreed Jersey cows, heifers, and calves.

The 1996 Nittany Lion Fall Classic sale committee members are Josh Harvatine, Thompson, overall chair; Meranda Dum, Landisburg, assistant chair; and Crystal Miller, Cambridge Springs, Jersey chair.

Other members include:

• Marketing/Merchandising, Publicity, Advertising — Charles Houp, Oley; Rachel Tanis, Centre Hall; Amy Packard, Troy.

• Finance — Mike Hix, Bernville.

• Arena Preparation — Ken Gesford, Montrose; Barbie Berrang, Valencia; Heidi Stephens, Jermyn.

• Barn Manager — Dave Fava, Bentleyville.

• Animal Preparation — Matt Lawrence, New Castle; Bill Beinlich, Monongahela.

Other club members on the Selection Committee are Dean Kohler, Kutztown; Corey Meyers, Mercersburg; Kraig Sellers, Lebanon; Diane Glock, Mifflin; Becky Urpack, Meshoppen; Pam McConnell, Volant; Lisa Stuchal, Slippery Rock; and Kara Tussey, Huntington.

Dairy Science Club members use the Fall Classic as an excellent "hands-on" educational experience. The sale provides firsthand experience in selecting, merchandising, and managing dairy cattle. Last year nearly 60 club members were involved in the sale.

If you are interested in consigning, call Ken Raney at the PHA office, (814) 234-0364; Josh Harvatine at (717) 679-2386; Meranda Dum at (717) 789-3701; or the Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State and ask for Larry Muller, (814) 863-4205 or Dale Olver (814) 863-3914. Jersey breeders should contact Crystal Miller at (814) 398-2422.

Ecofits Head To State Envirothon

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — PP&L Montour Preserve, in Montour County, is the host of the thirteenth annual Pennsylvania Envirothon this Friday and Saturday, June 21-22.

Approximately 300 high school students from the state will gather at the park to participate in this environmental competition. The students will compete at stations dealing with issues in the subject areas of aquatics, forestry, soils, wildlife, and current environmental issues. The current issue for this year's event is greenways.

County conservation districts from 55 of Pennsylvania's 67 counties are expected to sponsor teams at this year's competition. The county representatives qualified for the statewide competition by winning local Envirothons involving more than 5,500 youths across the commonwealth.

The ecofits from the James Buchanan High School in Mercersburg will represent Franklin County at the state competition. Members of this team include Ben Bonebrake, Herb Hoffeditz, Jeremey Shoemaker, Jeremey Hartman, and Jeremiah Hornbaker. Steve Harry is their teacher-adviser.

In addition to the team members and their adviser, Donna Hays, county envirothon coordinator, will attend the state event.

The local event is sponsored by the Franklin County Conservation District and Valley Quarries, Inc.

Boar Sale Aug. 14

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center wishes to announce the annual boar performance testing program and the ram performance testing programs are well under way.

The 20 boar pens the center has available are all being utilized. This group of boars consists of 32 Yorkshires, 16 Durocs, 12 Hampshires, four Berkshires, four Chester Whites, four Landrace, four Pietrains, and four Durocs x Hampshire crossbreds.

These boars are growing extremely well. Seven of the pens have already attained a pen average of 230 pounds and have officially concluded their testing periods.

The boars that have concluded their tests have been scanned with realtime ultrasound. These early results indicate that the center will have boars exhibiting record-breaking growth, boars with exceptional muscle, and some very lean boars.

The center is preparing for the 21st annual performance tested boar sale scheduled for Wednesday, August 14, at 6 p.m. in the Ag Arena on the campus of Penn State. This sale is again scheduled to coincide with Ag Progress Days.

The 72 rams on test were just weighed for their 56-day weight. Thus far, the rams are gaining extremely well. The rams will remain on test for another 28 days and then final weights will be taken. The rams then will have their breeding soundness and structural correctness evaluated and will be scanned ultrasonically to determine fat thickness and loin-eye area and have their final indexes calculated.

The Performance Tested Ram Sale is scheduled for Saturday, August 3, at 3 p.m. in the Ag Arena on the campus of Penn State University.

There is a very full days activities planned for August 3. In addition to the Performance Tested Ram Sale and the Individual Ewe Slae, the Sheep Producers Field Day Committee consisting of Joanne Evans, Dick Kuzemchak, Bob Calvert, and Don Hunter have a tremendous program in place.

Some of the topics on the program are (a) Strategic Nematode Parasite Control for Pennsylvania Sheep; (b) Transcervical Artificial Insemination in Sheep; (c) Don't Pull the Wool Over Your Customer's Eyes (body composition of market lambs); (d) Year-Round Feeding Systems for Sheep; (e) Youth Skill-a-Thon competition; (f) How to Prepare and Present Your Market Lambs for the Show Ring; (g) Show Ring Procedures and Ethics.

Other demonstrations, booths, and topics addressed include how to prepare fleece for sale, demonstrations of sheep handling equipment, spinning and weaving demonstrations, and instruction on safe and effective administration of injections.

Commercial trade show vendors are also planning to be on hand to exhibit their products and services.

There also will be an opportunity to have fecal samples checked for internal parasite infestation in your flocks. The field day activities are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. in the Ag Arena on the campus of Penn State.

For more information or to request sale catalogs, contact Glenn Eberly, Director — M.A.E.C., 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814) 238-2527 or (814) 865-5857.

Raleigh, Ames DRPCs To Merge

RALEIGH, N.C. — The advisory boards for the DHIA processing centers located in Raleigh, North Carolina and Ames, Iowa have endorsed a merger to better serve their customers.

The combined organization is to provide DHIA records processing services and on-farm records management software for 20 member DHIA affiliates serving 12,000 dairy producers with 1.3 million cows located in 31 states.

The organization is to also provide contract processing services and/or on-farm software for three DHIA affiliates serving an additional 6,500 dairy producers with 600,000 cows.

The combined total of 1.9 million cows represents 43 percent of U.S. DHIA enrollment.

When operations are merged, the central administration and central computer processing for the entire region will be in Raleigh. Through the use of telecommunication links, both Ames and Raleigh will provide complete training and support for all products and services for a portion of the total region.

Highlight color laser printing at both locations will distribute printing functions for improved turnaround time. By combining program development efforts, the merged organization will be able to reduce the time required for making software enhancements.

Both on-farm software programs (EBS and PCDART) will be supported until the best features of both products are incorporated into one software package.

An interim board has been appointed to evaluate the DHIA reports that will be provided to DHIA members as well as to finalize details on functions and staffing at each location.

The first joint annual meeting will be held on Nov. 1, 1996.

The overall conversion for processing and operations will be completed in 1997.

ADC, Dairy Network Partnership Use Trip

Lanyon said that as a result of one survey, in relationship to stream management — which along with groundwater degradation, poor watershed forestry practices, poor road drainage design, poor residential (especially older towns and villages) drainage, and a lack of knowledge and apparent financial benefit for taking better care — about half of those interviewed recognized that their operations may be negatively affecting stream quality.

Lanyon's point was that while farmers are seemingly somewhat aware of how their practices may be damaging streams, there is no incentive to spend any additional effort or devote time and money away from the dairy and family to make changes.

Also discussed were the facts that less than 50 percent of the ADC milk produced is used for drinking, that milk is retailed through a limited number of outlets, most of which are mega-grocery chains which operate solely on profit margins, to the extent that small percentages of a cent can make a difference in getting milk sold.

How to get the milk sold to a retailer, and then increase the retail price and collect the additional money was not yet worked out.

However, Lanyon mentioned that about 25 percent of the ADC milk is used in the manufacture of candy, seeming to suggest that perhaps a candy manufacturer could be brought into the program.

Laura England, public relations for ADC, said that ADC was approached because of its large base of producers, different marketing, and awareness of the environment.

Lanyon said that according to one source, there are more than 152 million consumers looking for one reason to buy a product and that marketers need to find that reason and associate their product with it.

Further, he said that, according to other surveys, more than 60 percent of current consumers are looking for an environmental cause to support.

The other portion of the trip was devoted to further understanding of the industries affecting the bay economies.

The Chesapeake Bay Foundation's skipjack sailboat, the Stanley Norman, sits moored in the bay at Annapolis, adjacent to the junction of Compromise and Main streets.

A banded sculpin is found inside an empty oyster shell among the catch of a small oyster dredge used by the Chesapeake Bay Foundation to educate on the bay's aquatic community.

Les Lanyon, with Penn State Cooperative Extension and part of a group called the Dairy Network Partnership, holds a graph and talks about consumer acceptance and selection for products identified with environmental responsibility.

Lebanon Crowns Dairy Princess

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Dairy Princess Pageant Committee held its annual dairy princess pageant recently at the Lebanon County Career and Technology Center (formerly the Lebanon Area Vo-Tech) in Lebanon, crowning Alisha Myers the 1996 princess.

Jayne Sebright, a program director for the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) and who with her husband has an Adams County dairy farm, welcomed the audience and interviewed contestants.

Alisha, 17, is the daughter of Gordon and Cherie Myers, of Lebanon. She works at the 120-acre Dennis Kauffman dairy farm with a 45 Holstein cow herd, and she works part time at Tractor Supply Company in Lebanon.

A student at Cedar Crest High School, she is vice president of her 4-H dairy club, treasurer of Cedar Crest FFA and secretary for the county FFA. She is also involved with Junior Holstein Club activities, and is a member of the county dairy bowl and dairy cattle judging teams.

In other activities, she is a member of her church youth group, is a pianist at church, a student athletic trainer, a member of students for Christ, and a volunteer in the nursery at Fairland Brethren in Christ Church.

She owns two Holstein heifers and her hobbies include showing Holsteins, volleyball and field hockey, and helping at her friends' farms.

Two Lebanon County dairy maids and a county lil' miss dairy princess were also crowned during the event.

Valerie Jean Bomgardner, 13, daughter of LeRoy and Evelyn Bomgardner, of Annville, and Amanda Martin, 14, daughter of Eugene and Kathy Martin, Lebanon, were crowned dairy maids, while Melissa Bashore, 8, daughter of Ricki and Roberta Bashore, Lebanon, was made lil' miss dairy princess.

Valerie Jean Bomgardner's parents farm 110 acres of crops and raise beef cattle and dairy heifers. A middle school student, Valerie is a member of the South Mountain 4-H Club, and is in the school chorus and band.

Amanda Martin owns two cows, four heifers and a bull at her parents' 160-acre dairy farm with a 90-Holstein milking herd.

Amanda has been involved in the county 4-H dairy club, a member of the county dairy bowl and dairy cattle judging teams, a member of the Junior Holstein Club, the Youth Action Club, and she attend Lebanon Valley Bible Church.

Her other activities include band, track and field hockey.

Melissa Bashore, owns a Brown Swiss heifer at her parents' 120-acre dairy farm with a 90-cow herd where Melissa helps milk twice a day and feed calves. Her parents also rent 300 additional acres for cropping.

Melissa is a student at Jonestown Elementary School, is a member of Little Swatara Church of the Brethren Sunday School, the Junior Holstein Club, and Norlebco 4-H Dairy Club.

In addition to her heifer, she also has two pet rabbits, and two dogs.

The state dairy princess program is run by the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services Inc., an organization supported by allocations from dairy farmer promotion assessments.

It has created a set of guidelines and qualifications for those seeking to promote the consumption and sale of milk and dairy products to consumers and to create a better understanding between rural and urban people.

Those selected to promote dairy products as dairy royalty maintain a record and scrapbook of their promotional activities.

Generally, activities include school programs, radio promotions, farm meetings, store promotions, non-farm promotions, newspaper articles promoting dairy products and other special events.

Many times dairy princesses are used to distribute awards during dairy shows and attend dairy group meetings to discuss their activities to those supporting the program.

During the Lebanon event, the county's 1995 dairy royalty discussed their past year's accomplishments and what it meant to them to serve as a representative of the industry in which they are involved.

The 1995 promotion court included Kristi Schoffstall, 1995 Lebanon County dairy princess; Stephanie Buck, alternate princess; Andrea (Andy) Bashore, dairy maid; and Faith Heagy, and Elizabeth Smith, both lil' misses.

Field Day Features Livestock Technology

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Cattle producers can learn about the latest developments in grazing, ultrasound technology, safety and other aspects of the livestock industry at the Cattlemen's Field Day, Saturday, July 20, at the Low Hill Farm in Washington County.

The event is sponsored jointly by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association and the Pennsylvania Simmental Association in cooperation with the Department of Dairy and Animal Science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the Washington County Cattlemen's Association.

"The program will examine a variety of different practices used by cattle producers and will feature information on some new technologies," said Dr. Lowell Wilson, professor of animal science at Penn State.

Wilson is to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of different methods of storing and feeding round bale silage and hay.

"Round balers and handling equipment designed for round baled silage and covering large hay packages have increased efficiency and quality of forages provided to beef as well as dairy cattle," he said.

"Some of the new techniques and equipment for making and covering round bales have potential to reduce costs and improve performance, which are primary considerations for the cattle industry."

Tom Calvert, grazing specialist with the Natural Resources Conservation Service in Somerset County, is to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of different fencing types. There are many alternatives to fencing for short duration and other types of grazing, and Calvert will explain costs and specific requirements for them.

Some new uses for the ultrasound or sonogram procedures in determining short-term pregnancies and in sexing of fetuses early in cattle gestation are to be discussed by Dr. Joe Young, Allegheny General Hospital and owner of Low Hill Farm, and Dr. Todd Van Dyke of Jackson Center. They have researched and developed ultrasonic techniques to expand the usefulness of ultrasound technology in livestock production.

Also featured will be special demonstrations of tractor rollover protection structures (ROPS) and other farm safety tools and techniques, conducted by Penn State's Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering. "Safety is an extremely important consideration in all types of farm operations," Wilson said.

Special guest speakers representing the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, the newly consolidated national beef organization, and the American Simmental Association also will be on hand.

Low Hill Farms is a purebred Simmental herd. Walking tours of the farm will be conducted in the morning and the afternoon on Saturday, July 20.

The field day also will feature the annual Junior Simmental Steer and Heifer Shows, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Simmental Association. Ernie Moore of Fairmount, West Va. will officiate. Commercial exhibitors also will be on hand to show and demonstrate the latest services and equipment available to cattle producers.

Low Hill Farm is located southeast of Washington, approximately seven miles south of Interstate 70 on Rt. 43 South. Take Exit 15A on I-70.

For more information about the field day, or to make arrangements for special tour groups, contact the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association at (814) 692-4208 or Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science at (814) 863-3653; (814) 863-6042 FAX.

N.J., N.Y. Milk $13.90

ALBANY, N.Y. — Dairy farmers who supplied regulated milk dealers (handlers) under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during May 1996 will be paid by handlers on the basis of a uniform price of $13.90 per hundredweight (29.9 cents per quart); the price for the corresponding month last year was $12.30 per hundredweight.

Market Administrator Ronald C. Pearce also stated that the price was $13.48 in April 1996. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

A total of 11,110 dairy farmers supplied handlers regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders with 1,054,357,655 pounds of milk during May 1996. This was a decrease of 1.6 percent (about 17 million pounds) from last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $148,178,836.83. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not premiums, deducations authorized by the farmer, or assessments.

Regulated handlers used 412,719,470 pounds of milk for Class I, 39.1 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For May 1996, handlers paid $15.12 per hundredweight (32.5 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $14.31 a year ago.

Handlers used 167,931,517 pounds of milk for Class II products, 15.9 percent of the total. Class II products include fluid cream, eggnog, ricotta and cottage cheeses, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $13.00 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture Class III products including butter, cheese (other than ricotta and cottage cheeses), and whole milk powder totaled 426,653,166 pounds (40.5 percent of the total). Handlers paid $13.65 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture nonfat dry milk (Class III-A) totaled 47,053,493 pounds (4.5 percent of the total). Handlers paid $11.78 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For May 1996, there was a price differential of 8.4 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk recieved from farms in the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Agronomic Field Diagnostic Clinic Set

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Penn State again will conduct an agronomic field diagnostic clinic this summer here at the Agronomy Research Farm.

The clinic will be held on two dates, July 23 and 25. The same program will be conducted both days.

These field days are designed to improve the agronomic management skills of industry personnel, extension and public agents, crop consultants, and producers. Specialists from Penn State and the agricultural community will provide hands-on diagnostic training in crop production, soil fertility and conservation, and pest management.

Participants choose from a variety of topics and have ample opportunity to diagnose, solve, and discuss crop management problems and situations. In addition to gaining practical agronomic knowledge, CCA and pesticide applicator license credits can be obtained.

This year's program will be slightly different from past programs. It will primarily focus on some of the new technologies and their applications in crop production; however, some basics will be covered as well.

As in the past, there will be time for discussion and hands-on participation. The program will include sessions on diagnostic techniques for early season corn, soybean nitrogen requirements and inoculation principles, potato leafhopper-resistant alfalfa varieties and management of sclerotinia in alfalfa, herbicide-tolerant crops, uses and economics of Bt corn varieties, and an introduction to yield monitors and their applications.

You are invited to attend one of the field days on Tuesday, July 23 or Thursday, July 25. The cost of registration is $35 and includes lunch, refreshments, and support materials.

Additional program details and registration information will be available from your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office or register by calling Lisa Crytser in the Department of Agronomy at (814) 865-2543.

Please register by July 12 so the department can estimate luncheon needs. For program information, call Dwight Lingenfelter, (814) 865-2242.

Topics include:

• Basics of early season corn diagnostic techniques. Field problem diagnosis and identification are important components necessary for solving crop production problems. Learn necessary techniques needed to effectively diagnose field problems. Information on assessing corn growth stages, seeding depth, plant populations, stand variation and other basic parameters will also be included. Participants will have an opportunity to develop their skills by diagnosing and identifying problems during hands-on exercises intended to bring together these aspects of troubleshooting.

• Soybean nitrogen requirements and inoculation principles. In most production systems in Pennsylvania, no nitrogen is applied for soybean production. We rely on the symbiotic relationship between soybeans and a bacteria species to meet the soybean nitrogen requirements. Learn the proper inoculation techniques and soil environmental conditions that must exist for this process to be successful. In addition, participants will remove and observe plant root/nodule systems in order to better understand this important process.

• Alfalfa pests: out with the old and in with the new. Potato leafhopper is the largest insect pest of alfalfa in the northeastern United States. Learn how and why new technology may cause potato leafhopper to be a pest of the past. Unfortunately, we have a relatively new disease, sclerotinia, that has burst on to the alfalfa scene and is destroying many alfalfa seedings. Learn more about this disease and what can be done to minimize its impact on alfalfa establishment.

• Herbicide-tolerant crops. Herbicide-tolerant crops are increasingly becoming a part of crop production systems. Learn more about the Roundup Ready, LibertyLink, Poast Compatible, IMI, and STS technologies incorporated into corn and soybean varieties. Understand these new crops and how to best utilize them to get optimum weed control and yield. See these new varieties firsthand and learn how they may fit into herbicide resistance management programs.

• Advances in insect pest management. Insect-resistant crops and new insecticide handling systems are a few of the new technologies incorporated into pest management systems. Learn about the new Bt corn technology and issues related to its management and economics. Compare varieties from four companies for controlling European corn borer. See firsthand new insecticide container systems and discuss the benefits. Updates on other insect pests include corn rootworm.

• Understanding yield monitors and their application. Precision, or site-specific agriculture is a hot topic. Learn about this advanced technology and understand the components necessary for operation. Watch a combine yield monitor demonstration and understand how it works. Learn how to interpret yield data by considering soil properties, cultural practices, environmental conditions, and other variables that may have affected yield.

Youth Gear Up For Limousin Show

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Junior exhibitors and Limousin enthusiasts are heading to Des Moines, Iowa July 8-13 for the 1996 National Junior Limousin Show and Congress.

With entries from 237 exhibitors in 26 states, the 446 head entered give the 20th anniversary edition show the second largest number of entries for a National Junior Limousin Show and Congress.

"In the past 20 years, the National Junior Limousin Show has grown from 65 heifers from six states to this year's 400 plus entries from 26 states," said George Hubbard, director of marketing, shows and junior activities for the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF).

In addition to two days of show ring competition, youth will have opportunities to compete in events such as public speaking, sales talk, cattle judging, cow camp, quiz bowl and the 4th Annual Limousin Beef Cook-Off.

For more information on the Limousin breed or the National Junior Limousin Show and Congress, contact the NALF office at (303) 220-1693.

NDB, UDIA Boards Approve New Funding Structure

ROSEMONT, Ill. — The boards of directors governing Dairy Management Inc. (DMI) each voted unanimously to revise the budget structure to equalize opportunities for qualified state/regional promotion organization representation and participation in national dairy promotion plans and programs.

Effective with the 1997 budget, the board voted institutes equal, reduced fees, allowing each state and regional organization greater capacity to voluntarily support and participate in national programs.

The restructuring effectively eliminates mandatory United Dairy Industry Association (UDIA) dues, which were based on each organization's total unified budget and used to fund national programs.

"This is a significant step forward toward unifying the industry," said Bob Gaebe, chairman of the National Dairy Board (NDB) and a dairy producer from New Salem, N.D. "It levels the playing field so all qualified dairy promotion organizations can participate equally and to as great a degree as they desire."

"This decision signals to the dairy industry that DMI programs will be funded equitably and developed with full representation across the nation," said Elwood Kirkpatrick, a dairy farmer from Kinde, Mich., who is DMI treasurer and chairman of an ad hoc committee on DMI funding structure.

"This change was set into motion by the leadership and vision of Elwood Kirkpatrick, who chaired the DMI Budget Restructuring committee," said Tom Gallagher, DMI chief executive officer. "Making these changes removes obstacles and allows the dairy industry to proceed with a long-term strategic planning process that all stakeholders can endorse."

A unified planning process and a focused national plan are key to keeping the dairy industry competitive and helping to build a greater quality of life for dairy producers long term, Gallagher added.

Dairy Management Inc. is a nonprofit organization formed by the National Dairy Board and United Dairy Industry Association that conducts programs in integrated marketing communication, promotion and research on behalf of America's dairy farmers.

Limousin Juniors Celebrate 25th Anniversary Show

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Some 250 exhibitors from 20 states are expected to attend the 20th anniversary National Junior Limousin Show and Congress in Des Moines, Iowa July 13-18.

Returning to the site of the national show in 1976, this year's event will be one of the largest Limousin national junior shows ever held.

"As sit has been for the last 20 years, the National Junior Show is the premiere event for juniors each year," said George Hubbard, director of marketing, shows and junior activities for the North American Limousin Foundation. "Over the years, the number of exhibitors has grown, as well as the educational and competitive opportunities available to the youth involved."

The centerpiece of the week will be the National Junior Limousin Heifer Show on Thursday July 11. Jack Ward of Roanoke, Ind. will put the official placings on the classes, accompanied by associate judge Doug Satree of Montague, Texas. On Wednesday, July 10, juniors will showcase their own breeding programs in the bred and owned heifer and bull show judged by Jerry Talsma, Edgarton, Minn. Doug Satree will also be in the ring Wednesday as judge of the Limousin steer show. As in the past two years, judges for the National Heifer Show and bred and owned shows will be given expected progeny differences (EPDs) on all cattle exhibited.

Outside the show ring, competition promises to be just as fierce. A series of satellite events taking place over the week will offer juniors opportunities in public speaking, sales talk, cattle judging, and a new event, cow camp. Cow camp is a hands-on event that will test juniors' basic skills in cattle management. Juniors an also compete in the quiz bowl and the 4th Annual Limousin Beef Cook-Off.

For more information on the National Junior Limousin Show and Congress or the North American Limousin Junior Association, contact George Hubbard at (303) 220-1693.

Education Foundation On The Road

EDGEWATER, Md. — The Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation (MAEF) is putting a new spin on the adage, "if Mohammed won't come to the mountain, the mountain will go to Mohammed."

With a grant of $10,000 from the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board and matching funds from other commodity organizations, MAEF soon will be able to take an ag products mobile classroom to Maryland school children in grades three, five, and eight.

"They just don't teach much about agriculture in the schools anymore," said Steve Connelly, executive director of MAEF. "We're hoping to reach 30 school sites a year with the mobile classrooms."

The mobile unit will be eight feet wide and 36 feet long with a 22-foot awning to extend for outside activities, "and plenty of signage," according to Bob Keenan, director for the Maryland Education Center for Agriculture, Science and Technology (MECAST), a unit of MAEF. Keenan, who has spent more than 30 years in education, came up with the idea for the mobile units and hopes to have four on the road eventually. There already is an aquaculture unit in service.

"Kids have a hard time getting away from school for things like field trips today," Connelly said. That's because of classroom demands of the Maryland School Performance Action Plan, a series of critical-thinking and problem-solving activities on which children are tested to obtain a school performance ranking.

"The beauty of the mobile units is that we can take everything to the kids without taking them out of school," Keenan said. Teachers who work with the units will have gone through a series of training sessions and students who participate will be prepared by their classroom teachers ahead of time and also have follow-up materials and activities.

"Our ultimate goal is to have teachers who are on sabbatical manning the units at all times," Connelly said. Each unit will stay at one location for one to two weeks.

"The grain unit will deal with all the current traditional agriculture crops and will have an emphasis on nutrition," Keenan said. "The kids will study about global marketing and production and they'll learn more about Maryland's products, too."

There will be end-use product activities such as making tofu from soybeans.

"We will have a series of activities to be done on the unit that requires problem solving and critical thinking that will fit right in with the Maryland School Performance Action Plan," Keenan said. Keenan said he sits down with a group of teachers with whom he can be "perfectly honest," and they design activities and projects.

"I want these teachers to marry agriculture," he said.

When a unit or a project is completed, the students will write a report to the grain board explaining the project.

Trust Elects Three To Board

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Eileen Rockefeller Growald and Nan Tucker McEvoy of the San Francisco Bay Area and William M. Dietel of northern Virginia have been elected to the board of directors of American Farmland Trust (AFT).

Growald is a farm owner and daughter of late AFT board member and co-founder Margaret McGrath Rockefeller. McEvoy owns and operates a Marin County, Calif., olive oil producing ranch and is director emeritus and former chairman of the San Francisco Chronicle publishing company. Dietel, a former AFT board member, serves as chairman of the National Center for Nonprofit Boards and president of the Pierson-Lovelace Foundation. He has a farm in Flint Hill, Va.

"We are pleased to have three individuals of this calibre joining our board of directors," said AFT President Ralph Grossi, a third-generation northern California rancher. "Eileen Growald brings to us the same strong commitment and dedication to farmland conservation and stewardship as her mother. Nan McEvoy has extensive firsthand knowledge and experience in the management of a start-up agricultural enterprise. And Bill Dietel provided outstanding leadership and service as an AFT board member in the past. All are truly welcome additions to our board."

As a child, Growald spent weekends on her parents' farm in Tarrytown, N.Y. She went to school on a 260-acre farm in upstate New York, later spending four years at Oldfields School in the cornfields of Maryland. After receiving a bachelor's degree in geography from Middlebury College and master's from Lesley College, she worked for Shelburne Farms in Vermont, first helping to create their education program and then becoming director of communications and development.

A native San Franciscan, McEvoy began her career as a journalist. In 1961, she became one of the first members of the Peace Corps, eventually co-running its office in Africa and becoming special assistant to the director. She later became associated with several nonprofit organizations in Washington, D.C. and was named "Woman of the Year" in 1973 by the Washingtonian magazine. She started her olive oil producing ranch in Marin County several years ago.

Dietel held academic positions at the Universities of Connecticut and Massachusetts. He served as assistant dean of Amherst College. In 1970, after nine years as principal at Emma Willard School in Troy, N.Y., he joined the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, serving as president from 1975 to 1987. He then entered the consulting field. Dietel served on AFT's Board from 1987 to 1993, when he stepped down to become a member of AFT's President Council.

Farmland Group Elects Rancher, Newspaper Publisher

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Edward H. Harte, Laredo, Texas, rancher and retired publisher of the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, has been elected the first director of American Farmland Trust to fill the Peggy Rockefeller chair.

The chair is a life member of the board position created to honor the memory and spirit of Margaret McGrath Rockefeller, AFT founding board member who died March 26. AFT is a national, nonprofit farmland conservation group working to stop the loss of productive farmland and to promote farming practices that lead to a healthy environment.

"Ed Harte has served with distinction on AFT's board of directors since 1985," said AFT President Ralph Grossi. "We are delighted that with his election to the Peggy Rockefeller chair, he can continue to provide the invaluable guidance, commitment, and dedication to the board and staff of AFT that we have come to expect of him."

Harte is a director of Harte-Hanks Communications, a publicly owned company based in San Antonio. He has served as president and director of the Inter-American Press Association, an association of publishers and editors from all the Americas. For five years in the late 1970s, he also was chairman of the board of the National Audubon Society.

CRI Signs Pact With New Zealand Dairy Board

SHAWANO, Wis. — Cooperative Resources International (CRI), a global marketer of United States cattle semen has signed a cooperative marketing agreement with New Zealand's largest dairy cooperative, Livestock Improvement Cooperative (LIC), a subsidary of the New Zealand Dairy Board.

LIC sells about 2.14 million unites of semen annually, about 1.4 million of which are sold as fresh semen. The have about 75 percent of the artificial insemination business in New Zealand, which has 2.8 million dairy cows in 14,500 herds.

CRI is heralding the agreement as a historic event, in a news release this week.

"This agreement develops a relationship with one of the premier cooperatives in the world," said Keith Heikes, chief operating officer of Noba Inc., a CRI subsidary based in Tiffin, Ohio. "LIC is totally guided by cooperative principles and their goals are very similar to those of CRI."

Key points in the agreemnt include an exchange of personnel training, joint research programming, and an exchange of programming ideas regarding processing of dairy records.

CRI will be the exclusive distributor of semen on LIC Holstein and Jersey sires and is likely to do some sourcing of United States embryos for LIC, according to the news release.

Father And Son Make Farming A Family Affair

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.) — Donald Replogle is farming the same Morrison's Cove ground on which he grew up.

"I don't know when I decided to be a farmer," he jokes, "It just happened. I guess there are still times when I don't know what I want to be when I grow up." Don began farming officially in 1959.

The original home place is just a part of the more than 700 acres of land being farmed by Don and his son, Steve with whom he formed a partnership in 1971.

Even on a chill and cloudless spring day, the Replogle farm is pleasant with a wide porch welcoming visitors to the big farm house owned by Don and his wife, Dorothy. Steve and his family live in the old homeplace about two miles from the newer farm.

Steve, the only one of three brothers to choose farming for his livelihood, feels much the same as his father. "I've just always been farming," he says. "Never thought of doing anything else."

The Replogle farm is strictly a family affair with Dorothy and Steve's wife, Cindy, helping with milking more than 120 Holstein cows, driving tractor or running errands.

Cindy's adaptability to farm life is remarkable, Steve admits. She was a "city girl" before marrying into the Replogle family. "Never even saw a cow up close before," says Steve, "but now she milks regularly."

"Yes," she's quite a girl," says her mother-in-law. "She gets up early to help with the milking, goes to work at the Northern Bedford High School cafeteria, and returns home to milk again."

"She likes animals but doesn't want any part of the machinery or field work," says Steve who claims this area as his own expertise.

"Steve started competing in tractor driving when he was five years old," laughs Donald. "Of course, it was a pedal tractor. The prize was a toy Massey Harris metal tractor and Steve easily pedaled over the finish line in first place to claim it."

Later, as an extra reward, the family stopped for ice cream and Steve let his new toy which caused a panicky return trip to reclaim it.

As the years passed, Steve earned numerous blue ribbons and first place awards for his tractor driving abilities. Machinery has continued to be his first farm love.

Several years ago, he decided they just didn't make a corn wagon large enough to haul all of the corn necessary to feed more than 240 head of dairy cattle. Steve designed and created his own.

The wagon was made from plywood on a flat truck bed and the entire family nailed and painted to get it finished for corn season.

Another wagon made of aluminum was constructed the next year. Now neighbors sometimes rent one of the rigs for use in their own corn fields.

Steve also converted an old gasoline truck into a manure spreader and designed an agitator for stirring manure that works from a motor.

"He builds a new sprayer every year," laughs Don. "We always think this will be the sprayer that does everything but are never quite satisfied. So, Steve designs and builds a new one."

Like all farmers, the Replogles see constant changes on the farm. "We've most recently tried rotational grazing," Don says. "And have found it to be very satisfactory. Milk production went up al-

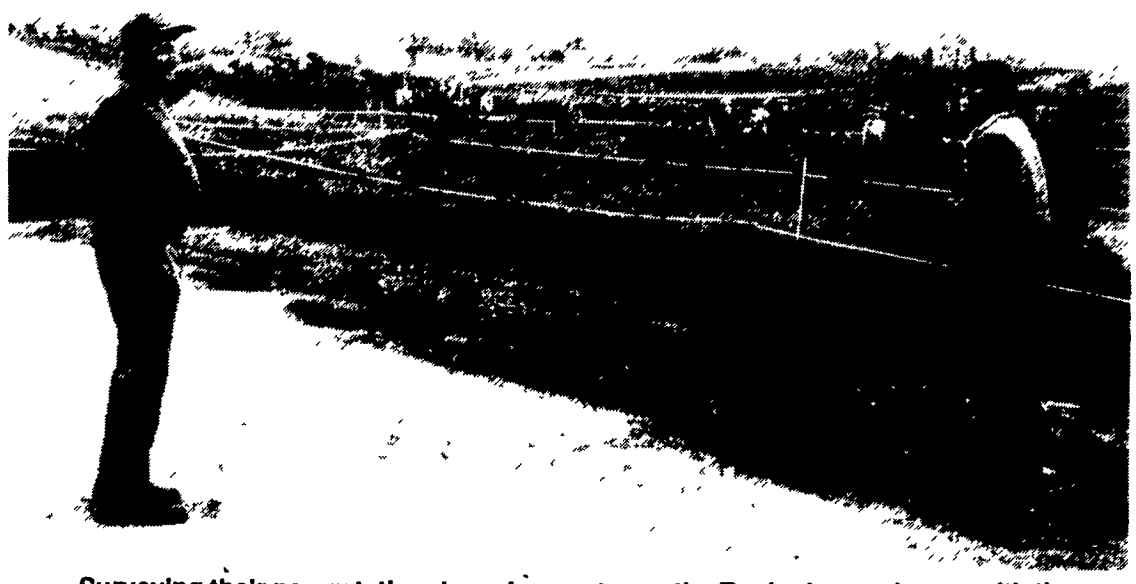
Don and Steve confer over repairs to be made to the combine before the summer harvesting season arrives.



Surveying their new rotational grazing pastures, the Replogles are happy with the results.

Angora Rabbits Weave Profitable Business

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — When Judy Osborn, a data entry clerk, saw a demonstration on spinning with angora rabbit wool she quickly decided, "I could do that!"

Living in a suburban area with only ½ acre of ground, Judy and her husband, Phil, now have about 40 angora rabbits mostly of the German Great breed although some are cross bred with English Satin. With so much coming from so little land, the couple named their business, "Abundance Acres."

Most of their marketing is done through the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival held annually in May or at the Charlottesville Wool event in Virginia. This year, they have applied to the Rinebeck Festival in New York State.

"We love it," says the vivacious Judy. "We get to meet a lot of people as well as sell yarn, wood, and rabbits."

The cuddly bunnies quickly draw a crowd and the bunny on display is changed regularly as too much attention can be an aggravation.

Wool is extracted from the rabbits by clipping and plucking. "Plucking takes forever," Judy admits. "So we do more clipping. We never comb the rabbits."

Sometimes for demonstrations only, Judy will spin the wool directly from the rabbit seated comfortably on her lap. "Spinners don't do that often," she notes, "Because it is quite hot for both the spinner and the rabbit."

Good rabbits, especially the giant varieties being raised by the Osborns, produce two to three pounds of wool per year. It sells for $4 to $6 per ounce. Or, one rabbit could produce about $240 worth of wool per year.

Judy and Phil concentrate on the giant species of rabbits which range in weight from 10 to 15 pounds. These sell for about $100 each.

"We allow the does to have two or three litters per year but no more," explains Judy. "Meat rabbit breeders can produce many more litters, but too much breeding would destroy the wool on our mothers." Litters average five or six bunnies with a max of eight settings at the dinner table.

"We also keep very strict breeding records to bring out the best genetic qualities in the offspring."

The Osborns keep their rabbits in a 10 x 20-foot barn located in their backyard. Rabbits are kept in cages.

"We have no problem with cold," Phil assures. "Cold is never a problem with these wooly rabbits."

Heat, on the other hand, is a different story. "They mind the heat a lot," Judy says. "And, we do we all we can to keep them comfortable. We even freeze water and use it for air conditioning."

Rabbit products offered at the festival.

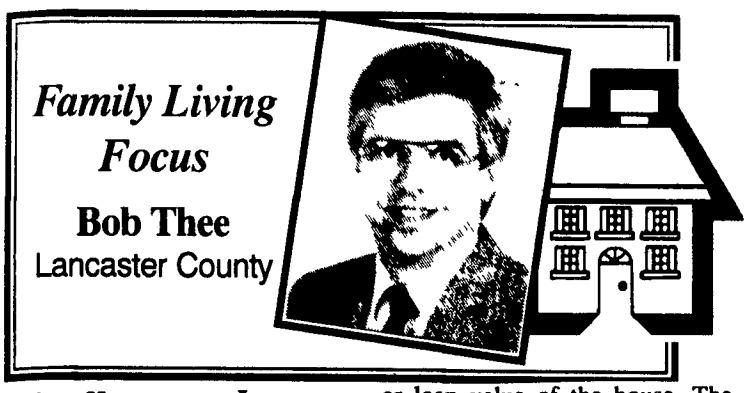
Big Red Bunny Feed provides necessary nourishment with the addition of some daily hay. One day a week, however, the rabbits receive only hay and oats.

"This keeps the hairballs out of their stomachs," Judy explains. "A rabbit has a glandular stomach and, therefore, is not able to throw up a hairabll. Cats, on the other hand have muscular stomachs, and have no trouble getting rid of their excess stomach hair."

Judy and Phil hope to keep expanding their rabbit business. "When we outgrow our present property, it is our dream to look for a small farm," she explains.

Meanwhile, the couple is having a lot of fun meeting new people and constantly learning more about the world of angora rabbits.

HOMESTEAD NOTES



Is Your Homeowners Insurance Adequate?

If your home were to be damaged by fire, how much of the loss would be covered by your insurance?

It may not be what you think if your home is not considered to be fully insured. All homeowners insurance policies contain a replacement cost provision on losses to the dwelling. So if you experience a loss, the insurance company must pay for the full amount of replacing the damage to the home, less the deductible, right? Wrong.

Many people don't understand how the replacement cost provision works. First, there are two types of replacement coverage. Replacement coverage to the dwelling, which is standard on most policies, and an optional replacement cost coverage or endorsement for personal property.

Second, there are two ways insurance companies will value the loss. One is the actual cash value, or the depreciated value. The other is the replacement cost. That is the cost of rebuilding the structure with materials of the same kind and quality at current costs or the cost of replacing the personal property. Replacement cost should not be confused with market value or loan value of the house. The market value is what the house will sell for, but it may cost considerably more to rebuild the home because of the type of materials and workmanship of the original house.

Replacement cost coverage on the dwelling provides that if, at the time of loss, the amount of insurance covering a building is at least 80 percent of the replacement cost of the building, the loss will be paid on a replacement cost basis. Being paid on a replacement cost basis means that the loss will be paid without a deduction for depreciation up to the limit of the policy. The 80 percent figure works as a co-insurance provision. That is, in the event of a total loss, you are responsible for the last 20 percent.. Alternatively, if the building is insured for 100% of the replacement cost coverage, the insurance company will pay the full cost to rebuild the structure, even if the cost exceeds the amount of insurance.

So far, we've been looking only at the case of a total loss. Suppose you suffer only a small or partial loss. Here again the 80 percent co-insurance provision becomes important. If your home is insured for at least 80 percent of the replacement cost of the dwelling, you will still be insured in full for losses of less that the policy limit. For example, on a house whose replacement cost is $100,000 and is insured for 80 percent of replacement cost, a loss of $15,000 would be covered in full, less the deductible. Assuming the deductible amount of $250, the first $250 (the deductible) is your loss. After that, any amount up to $80,000 is covered by the insurance. And any loss greater than that is yours. But if your coverage is for less than 80 percent of replacement cost, you would not be reimbursed in full for partial losses. In that case the amount the insurance company would pay would be only a fraction of the loss. The fraction is determined by the ratio of the actual coverage to 80 percent of the full replacement cost. If, for example, your house was insured for only $60,000 when full replacement cost would be $80,000, the insurance company would cover only 75 percent—$60,000 divided by $80,000—of the loss after the deductible. The maximum is still the limit set by the policy. One reason people get in trouble is because they have not adjusted their policy limits to account for inflation or higher construction costs. A home that was once fully covered is no longer because its replacement cost has increased over the years while the insured amount remained the same. An inflation guard endorsement on the policy will take care of this situation by automatically increasing the coverage. As explained earlier, an unchanged value or loss in market value is irrelevant because it is the replacement cost that is the critical factor.

For personal property, the standard homeowners policy will cover losses up to an amount that is 50 percent of the coverage on the dwelling. Losses are in terms of actual cash value, that is, the depreciated value. Coverage for replacement value of personal property is available for a nominal additional cost. This would mean that the eight-year-old television that still works perfectly would be replaced with a new television of comparable quality rather than using the depreciated value which may be nearly nothing. If you haven't reviewed your coverage within the last year or two, make an appointment with your insurance agent to do so. Finding out you have insufficient coverage can be a costly mistake.

Father And Son

Pastures have been divided off to allow separate grazing for the best milkers, the slow milkers, and those which are about to come fresh.

Recent winters have not been kind to the farming industry. Several years ago, heavy snows caused a barn to collapse which caused consequences to the dairy herd. "We couldn't get them under roof, the weather was bad, and we had a number of cows get sick," Don recalls.

"We had insurance on the barn but had trouble getting the insurance company to pay up. We were glad when everything finally got settled."

"We even had trouble with breeding. We've finally been able to solve that problem by getting a bull and this past winter, we've had a healthy herd again."

This past winter caused some problems with the alfalfa. "We're not sure if it was the flooding or what, but the older crops don't look good," Don says. "However, the younger crops seem to be doing well."

Don and Steve both feel the biggest problem with farming today is cash flow. "You just can't seem to get ahead," Don says. "You have money coming in but there are always bills waiting to be paid."

The Replogles are concerned about the future of farming. "We see a lot of herds going on the auction block," Don says. "Younger people can hardly get started at farming these days because machinery, land, and cattle are all too expensive. And, there is more money to be made elsewhere. I couldn't interest my two younger sons in the farm. But, some day, the country will realize that value of the farmers. We hope it's not too late."

"There's going to continue to be changes, lots of them," adds Steve. "But someone will always be around to do it."

Our visitors begin arriving even before the sun is up.

The first glides in as dawn is nudging away the lingering shadows of night. He takes up his usual position, gathers a deep breath and with unbridled enthusiasm sings praises to the coming day.

Not a rooster. A mockingbird. This bird takes very seriously his responsibility to jumpstart the morning with his raucaus wake-up calls. Or maybe he's the alarm for the roosters who do get in on the action soon afterward.

Early mornings and late evenings find the mockingbird dominating the chorus of birdsongs that belies that familiar phrase "quiet countryside." Fact is, our feathered friends are noisy neighbors.

But it's an enjoyable racket.

This mockingbird is a virtual one-man-show by himself (herself?). His repertoire spans the gamut of the songs of assorted other species, plus his own original version of rap music. And he's an unabashed entertainer who demands your attention.

He'll practically land on your head to make sure you're paying him proper attention.

His wake-up calls seem to originate high in the trees of the backyard — just beyond the window screens. Or so it sounds. If I go to the garden, he'll chatter from the overhead electric wires — probably commenting on the weeds that are growing this year like . . . weeds.

When we sit at the fishpond, he parks in the brushpile of limbs brought down by the spring ice storm. We planned to get rid of that brushpile, but another bird interfered. A Northern (Baltimore) Oriole finds the top of the pile to be a handy spot to pause on ingoing and outgoing flights from a nest somewhere in the maples. At least that's what The Farmer keeps telling me. I've yet to see the elusive black and orange fellow.

And further holding up the brushpile cleanup is the family of baby bunnies that streak in and out from the bottom of the pile of limbs. They claimed the pile as home after outgrowing their birthplace — a fur-lined hole located smack in the middle of the strawberry patch. Recently I had to rescue one of the bunnies when it sneaked back into the patch to snack on berries and became entangled in the bird-deterrent netting.

Another of the mockingbird's favorite haunts is also shared with a fellow backyard resident. The farm's electric service pole sits just outside the front entrance to the dairy barn. From the very tiptop of that tall pole, just above the transformer, he sits to belt out solos while I feed calves. A squirrel sprawled over the top of the pole one recent morning appeared to have died there. Perfectly still, the squirrel's bushy tail hung limply down to one side; but with the binoculars I could see its eyes were open. I've never seen a squirrel so still. Maybe it was just playing possum, because later, it vanished. Or some hawk had breakfast.

But the mockingbird's most inspiring hangout appears to be what we call the "osprey nest." Some years ago, our son devised this tall pole with a flat nest site on top and erected it on the lower edge of the big pond. On a rare occasion or two, we have had an osprey visit; more normally, the perch hosts hawks, herons, and kingfishers.

One recent evening, that boisterous mockingbird followed us to the pond, landed on the platform and began to belt out his medley of songs. About every 30 seconds, he'd stop singing, do several acrobatic flips around in the air, then resume singing. This bazarre behaviour went on for several minutes.

There's no way to know for sure.

Angela Werley Wears Berks County Crown

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — As the new dairy princess for Berks County, Angela Werley plans to set an example for her peers.

When asked and impromptu question during the pageant held recently, Angela said that she drinks milk and eats dairy products in front of her friends to encourage them to do the same.

In promotional duties for the county, Angela will be assisted by Alternate Tammy Epting and Li' Miss Kelly Rohrbach.

Angela is the 18-year-old daughter of Phillip and Donna Werley of Tilden Township Berks County. She helps her family on their Phil-Don Farm where they milk 65 Holstein dairy cows. Angela owns 20 head of dairy cows. Despite her involvement in dairy production, Angela is no newcomer to dairy promotion because she has served as a dairy ambassador for the past five years.

In addition to helping on the farm, Angela works part time at Laurel Nursing and Rehabilitation Center as a dietary aide and is attending Penn State Berks Campus studying dairy and animal science.

In the upcoming year, Angie will find time to remain active in the Northern Berks 4-H Dairy Club, Virginville Grange, and the Berks County Junior Holstein Club.

The alternate dairy princess is the 18-year-old daughter of Dave and Sandy Epting. Tammy is a graduate of Hamburg High School and plans to attend Reading Area Community College. She works on Reu-Hel Farms Inc. of Mohrsville and owns six Holsteins. Tammy is active in Northern Berks 4-H Dairy Club, the Berks County Junior Holstein Club, and was a Berks County dairy ambassador.

Lil' Miss Kelly is the daughter of Allen and Beth Rhorbach of Shoemakersville. They have Lacy Acres Farm where they milk 64 Holsteins and farm 200 acres. Kelly, Angela, and Tammy will travel all over Berks County this coming year to promote the dairy industry.

Outgoing Dairy Princess Jennifer Davis is the 20-year-old daughter of Ray and Frances Davis of Leesport. In her farewell speech, Jennifer included a slide show to help show everyone what she did during the year as dairy princess. Jennifer thanked the ambassadors, alternates Sherry Hoffman of Oley, Carrie Hetrick of Boyertown, and Li'l Miss Maggie Heller.

Judges for the pageant were Joyce Graybill of Lancaster County, Martha Gregory, and Mike Firestien both of Lebanon County.

Recipes To Keep You On The 'Moove'

Those scrumptious dairy recipes keep filling the pages. This is the fourth week for printing recipes from the Cow Mania Drawing. The final installment is next week when the winners of the drawing will be announced.

Enjoy these wondertul recipes, pictures and tidbits from our readers.

SOUTHERN CORN PUDDING WITH TOPPING

2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups frozen whole kernel corn
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon melted butter

Combine eggs and corn; set aside. Blend together flour, sugar, salt, and pepper. Stir in a little of the milk to make a paste. Add remaining milk; beat smooth. Stir in butter; then mix with corn mixture. Pour into greased 1½ -quart casserole. Set in pan containing one-inch hot water. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour.

Topping:
1 tablespoon flour or cornstarch
⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup butter
½ cup water

Cook ingredients until thick. Have ready to pour over corn when it comes out of oven. Serves 8.

This is a simple yet different way to do a corn dish. I sometimes use it for company or just to fix corn some other way.

My husband and I have lived on a small farmette for 21 years. Our sons are now grown and married. We have a 12-year-old daughter also. When the boys were young, they raised many different animals and also enjoyed 4-H. Although we have just a few acres, it has been a wonderful place to raise a family, enjoy some gardening, and just great to be out in the country.

I am so appreciative of all the staff who work so hard to coordinate recipes and interesting articles in the Lancaster Farming. Thank you.

TURKEY QUICHE

3 cups stuffing or 6-ounce package stuffing mix
1 cup turkey or chicken
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
4 eggs, beaten
5⅓ -ounce evaporated milk
Pepper to taste

Press stuffing into 9-inch greased pie pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 minutes.

Combine meat and cheese. In another bowl, beat eggs, add milk and pepper. Sprinkle meat into crust. Pour egg, milk mixture on top. Bake uncovered in 350 degree oven for 30-35 minutes or until set. Let stand 10 minutes.

GOLDEN CREAM SOUP

3 cups chopped potatoes
1 cup water
½ cup chopped carrots
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 chicken boullion cube
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
¼ -½ pounds cheese

Combine all ingredients except flour, milk, and cheese. Simmer for about 15-20 minutes or until vegetables are soft. Then mix the flour and milk and add to vegetable mixture. Cook until thickened then add cheese. We prefer Velveeta but I'm sure another mild creamy cheese would be fine. Serves 6-8 people.

My husband Nelson and I have a 2-year-old son Travis. We live on a dairy farm in northern Lancaster County close to the little town of Mastersonville. We milk 45-50 Holsteins and have around 35 heifers. Milking cows can be a demanding job but I enjoy it knowing as a family we can spend more time together.

Glenda Weaver
Manheim

Travis, son of Glenda and Nelson Weaver, shows off his birthday gifts. His mother writes that if his interest in farming stays as it is now, the words on the T-shirt will hold true — Future Farmer of America.

Nothing like a dairy spread to dress up bagels, toast, and breads.

BANANA SPLIT CAKE

2 packages graham crackers, crushed fine
½ cup butter, melted
2 small packages instant vanilla pudding
4 cups low-fat milk
20-ounce can pineapple chunks packed in juice, drained
3-4 bananas, sliced
12-ounces whipped cream topping
Sliced almonds
Maraschino cherry halves

Crush graham crackers until fine and add melted butter. Mix until crumbly, then press into bottom of an ungreased 9x13-inch pan. Arrange drained pineapple chunks and banana slices on crust. Mix pudding according to the package directions. Smooth pudding over the entire pan content. Top with whipped cream and garnish with maraschino cherries and almond slices. Chill until serving time.

I adapted this recipe for my diabetic husband, Cecil, for holidays and special occasions. My co-workers love it too! We live in Cumberland County, New Jersey, and have four children, David, Cindy, Bob, and Allison and one granddaughter, Kelly.

Cecil is a mechanic and I work at the Prudential AARP Southern New Jersey office. We enjoy visiting the shore and antique tractor shows in our neighboring states.

EGGNOG

4 eggs
4 cups milk
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup cream (optional)
⅓ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Beat eggs until thick and lemon-colored. Add sugar, nutmeg, and vanilla. Add ice-cold milk and cream. Beat with rotary beater until frothy. Makes 6 large glasses.

I am 15 years old. I have four brothers and two sisters. We live on a farm and milk about 37 cows. We also have 30 chickens and when we have extra eggs, we make eggnog. It is very good when it's cold.

DIPPING CHOCOLATE

16-ounce bag of milk chocolate chips
1 cup of half and half
1 cup of sour cream

Put all in pan and put on low heat until chocolate chips melt. Stir and mix well.

Serve with strawberries, chunks of angel food cake, grapes, and fresh pineapple cubes. There are a variety of items you can use for dipping.

To warm again, use a microwave.

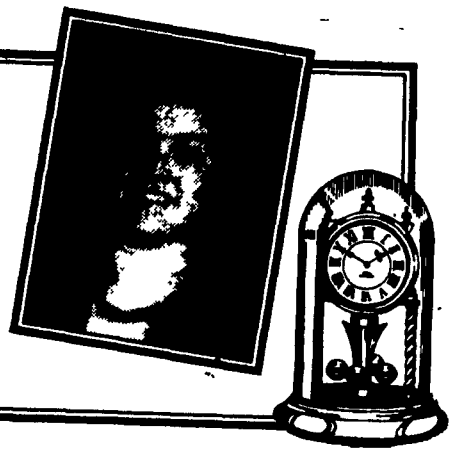
Taking Time by Rebecca Escott



Take Time For Safety

Now that school's out, summer fun is in full swing with families departing for vacations and gathering for family reunions. But summer fun is not without its accidents.

Accidents happen. Unfortunately many of the injuries that people suffer during the summer are preventable. These injuries result because individuals have not taken the time to make safe choices, to provide safe equipment/toys, and to carefully monitor activities.

Whether in the field, the backyard, on the road, or in the home, every person needs to reconsider the costs of being casual about personal safety. Consider these summer injury statistics:

• 221,600 children ages 14 and under are treated each year in hospital emergency rooms for playground equipment-related injuries.

• Each year 43,000 Americans are injured in and around swimming pools. Two hundred twenty children between the ages of five and nine drown each year. Of those, 25 percent knew how to swim.

• Every year between 9,000 and 12,000 people are treated in emergency rooms for injuries associated with fireworks. Two-thirds of the victims are children. (That means one-third are adults. None of us is invulnerable to injury.)

• Fireworks in 1993 also resulted in 30,200 fires that caused $21.3 million property loss.

Both the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Consumer Product Safety Commission stress that many injuries and summer crises are preventable.

I decided that this year I would take action to reduce our families' risk of injuries. This spring I invested in "Funnerworks." I recently discovered these neat "fireless fireworks." After trying them I was convinced that these products are safe, reusable alternatives to backyard sparklers, bottle rockets, and snap caps. I've given them to my nieces and nephews, my brother-in-law, and my husband's family. We've had a wonderful time experimenting with them.

When neighbors come to play at our house, they run to the toy basket looking for the "Funnerworks."

What might you do to increase your family's safety? First, commit to careful monitoring of your children's activities. Excitement, boredom, physical exhaustion, and daydreaming all can make a child more vulnerable to injury. Make sure that children travel with a buddy. And always provide attentive, adult supervision at pools, lakes, and creeks. Adult supervision is also critical around farming equipment and other motor vehicles.

Before the summer progresses any farther, sit down with all your family members and review safety rules. Write these down and post them. For teens, this may mean always leaving a note or telling a parent where you will be and providing a phone number and estimated return time. For a preschooler, the rule may be different. You may want to remind them to always hold hands with an adult when crossing a road or parking lot. Also teach (and model to them) the rule about not walking in front of or behind a moving swing.

Take time to review rules about who can/can't operate equipment and the procedures for doing that. Also, state very clearly what a person should do if an accident happens. How does that person get help?

When you visit a play area, mall, amusement park, motel, or picnic grounds, survey the area. What are some of the dangerous spots? Point them out and state a rule clearly . . . before your children go exploring. Then be assertive enough to enforce those rules or to remove the temptation by changing the location. It's a great community service to clean up trash at a park or to sand a splintered wood surface. You and your family can take positive steps to make your experience a safe, fun one.

Although lifeguards, playground supervisors, safety belts, and park policies all convey a sense of security to families, they are NOT a substitute for parental supervision. In fact many floatation devices — rafts, water wings, etc. — are specifically marked as NOT being water SAFETY equipment. They may even work against a child's natural balancing ability.

Peers may also pressure children to try unsafe adventures. Stores may not monitor the purchase of toys/products as you would wish. Ultimately, it is the adult family member's responsibility to enforce basic safety rules and to follow those rules, too.

A few simple steps like those described above can make all the difference between children experiencing a safe summer and children being injured unnecessarily.

Whether it's with your children or grandchildren, take the time this week to have a safety refresher course. Restate the rules we "all know." Start by saying, "I just want to remind you that at grandma's house, EVERYONE . . ." or "It's been a while since you've been home all day, I want to remind you of our house rules." This simple reminder conversation followed by careful adult supervision may save a trip to the emergency room. It may even save a life.

QUESTION — Dixie Fix, Harrisonville, would like some recipes using stuffing tomatoes. She planted seed from Gurney's. All they had was yellow seed. Does anyone know if seeds are available for green stuffing tomatoes or if they can be stuffed like peppers and frozen?

QUESTION — A reader would like to have recipes for hash browns, and fruit cocktail jam that has vanilla instant pudding and orange Jell-O as an ingredient.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for chocolate pizza made in a pizza pan.

QUESTION — Virginia Haines, Tabernacle, N.J., would like instructions for making eggs look like wood. She saw it demonstrated on television but didn't hear the amount of vinegar and water nor did she get the address so she could write to them for the recipe. She said that a flower or design is put on the raw egg and wrapped in nylon stocking pulled tight with a twister. Let it cook slowly in onion skins for four or five hours. She writes that the eggs are beautiful and look just like wood and will last a lifetime.

QUESTION — Lynda Lamp, Baltimore, Md., would like a recipe that her mother's friend used to make about 20 years ago called Triple Chocolate Cake. She remembers that it was made with a chocolate cake mix, chocolate pudding, and chocolate chips. Instead of icing, the top was dusted with confectioners' sugar.

QUESTION — Alta Sensenig, Newville, would like to have a recipe for butter and egg dinner rolls, which are really moist.

QUESTION — Melva Baumer, Millmont, wants ideas for main course dishes that can be hauled to the field to be served to hired help.

QUESTION — Ruth Virginia Erb, Beavertown, would like a recipe for the starter to Romtoph Friendship cake. She stored her starter in the freezer, but her husband thought it was ice cream topping and ate it.

QUESTION — Christine Ayers of Clarks Summit would like a recipe for apple cider doughnuts and cabbage salad that tastes like that made at the Country Cupboard Restaurant in Lewisburg.

QUESTION — Deanna Cunfer, Lehighton, would like recipes for broiled scallops. She writes that when she makes them at home they lack that special something that makes them so tasty at good restaurants.

QUESTION — D. Newsom, N.Y., would like a recipe that tastes similar to Mrs. Smith's French Apple Pie made with raisins and confectioners' icing on top.

Kids Cannot Be Replaced

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — There are few issues in the agricultural industry that opposing sides can agree on, but one topic that merits overwhelming support is protecting our most valuable resources — our children. Over the past year I witnessed time and again the quick, enthusiastic, and generous response of communities wanting to promote farm safety for kids.

Union County is the most recent area to recognize the need for addresssing this critical concept. On Saturday, June 1, 100 children participated in a Farm Safety Day Camp for Kids at Mifflinburg High School. The children attended interactive workshops demonstrating safety tips and hazard awareness in areas such as tractors, pesticides, lawn mowers, falls and injuries, livestock, fire, ATVs, farm machinery, electricity, and first aid.

Providing a county-wide farm safety camp is no easy task. Many phone calls, meetings, letters and miles of legwork are necessary for the success of the program. Yet, with members of Union County volunteering time, energy and finances, the organizational process was not difficult at all! Agribusinesses and health organizations, public servants and private citizens, farmers, teachers, parents and grandparents all saw a need and rose to the challenge. Our children need to learn to see, to realize that farms are great places to live but farms can also be dangerous. At the Day Camp I watched the children having fun while learning lifesaving information. The demonstrators were joking, yet serious. Any bystander could sense the undercurrent of excitement running through the day. The kids were taking responsibility for their own well-being. They were sowing the seeds of safety for themselves. Most importantly, positive role models from their own community were saying, "We care about what happens to you, we support safe farm practices, we want you to grow up healthy and happy on your farm."

A handful of concerned people formed a Farm Safety Committee. The committee mushroomed into 30-plus volunteers. The volunteers snowballed into more than 30 community sponsors. Fifty campers doubled to 100 campers, and then tripled to include 50 parents.

For more information on the Farm Safety For Kids program, contact Deborah Webb, Union County Cooperative Extension, 103 S. Second Street, Lewisburg, PA 17837-1996 or by phone at (717) 524-8721.

Environmental Projects Intrigue Children

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Blue skies, sunshine, balmy temperatures, a farm and lots of happy kids were all the ingredients necessary for a successful environmental science/biology project for the students of Laura Jackson, a teacher at Bedford High School.

Working with Mrs. Jackson were the first graders of Beverly Wakefield of Bedford Elementary. Mrs. Wakefield and her husband, Jim, are the owners of the Colerain Township farm where the event was held.

The project requires the older students setting up environmental stations including: solid waste management and recycling; predator-prey relationships; water conservation/Chesapeake Bay; flower power; freshwater ecology; energy needs; agriculture; and native American heritage.

Solid waste management was a real hit with a high school student hidden inside a decorated "recycling" box. Children threw in assorted pieces of junk. After much shaking and noise making, a complete recycled project was tossed outside.

With a large pond, the Wakefield farm was an ideal location for the freshwater ecology project. Complete with strainers, children tempted fate as they learned about aquatic vertebrates, organisms, and the food chain.

Predator/prey relationships followed the first graders to be introduced to box turtles, snakes, and rodents by their high school teachers who were more than willing to provide specimens.

An energy hike involved the smaller children representing bluebirds, bobcats, mice, groundhogs, and deer while searching for food on an inviting path on the Wakefield farm.

A water conservation/Chesapeake Bay station was located near the pond. Senior students had drawn maps of Pennsylvania and the Chesapeake Bay. Smaller children added pepper, raisins and mini-marshmallows to represent pollution. A spray of water demonstrated how it could all end up in the bay.

The dairy princess led the young children in barn bingo and gave them a tour of the barn and calf hutches for the agriculture site.

Flower power allowed young children to plant flower seeds to take home.

A large tepee was the perfect backdrop for "Native American Heritage," where students learned about making feather and bead necklaces out of strips of scrap leather.

"We learned how bad it is to pollute," said one first grader as she knocked down a stand of soda bottle bowling pins.

"It's been a wonderful project," Mrs. Jackson affirms. "My older students learn a lot about teaching and become very creative in their methods. The younger children learn a lot about the environment."

The project is made possible through a grant funded by the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Office.

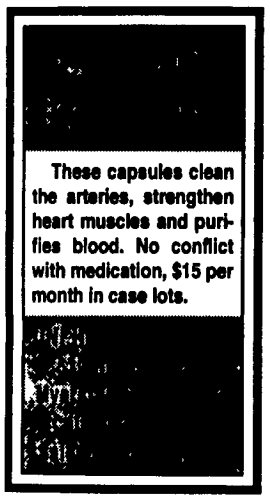
Is Oatrim The Answer?

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Oatrim has recently appeared on the list of ingredients in some packaged food.

Developed by the Agricultural Research Service scientist, oatrim is in a growing number of brand foods, and the flour-like product can also be purchased commercially.

Oatrim—a fiber-rich fat replacer made from oats may have a role in reducing the risk of heart disease. An 11-week study found that oatrim dramatically reduced oxidation of fatty acids in 24 men and women. Oxidation of fats circulating in the blood is believed to trigger the process that leads to blocked arteries. So a reduction in oxidation could lower the risk of heart disease.

Eating foods containing oatrim significantly lowered blood cholesterol and systolic blood pressure and improved glucose tolerance, which reduces the risk of diabetes. Also, oatrim holds promise in weight reduction: volunteers in the study lost weight despite every effort to keep weight constant.



These capsules clean the arteries, strengthen heart muscles and purifies blood. No conflict with medication, $15 per month in case lots.

Betty Buffington feeds information into the computerized sewing machine. In addition to reproducing original pictures, logos, and photographs, she has more than 4,000 designs from which to select patterns.

Stitching A New Career

LOIS SZYMANSKI
Maryland Correspondent

TANEYTOWN, Md. — Once she helped milk cows. Now she stitches them on jackets and hats, shirts and more. With her home-based business, B & B Monogramming, Betty Buffington of Taneytown stitches cows and dogs, cats and logos . . . almost anything a customer requests.

From her home that sits on part of the land that was once a 140-acre dairy farm belonging to her husband's family, Mrs. Buffington works daily in the business she began almost seven years ago.

"I was wanting to get into something when I saw the machine in a magazine," Mrs. Buffington said of her venture. "My husband, (Harry) said if I wanted to do it he was 100 percent behind me, so I went to look at the machine." A few weeks and just one lesson later she was forging ahead in a territory she knew little about.

"I didn't know anything about computers," she said. "When I first stitched on it I cried a lot!"

The sewing machine Mrs. Buffington uses, made by Pantogram of Florida, reads the design she chooses from a computer disk then tells the machine how to stitch it. Mrs. Buffington picks the colors and the size of the logo, then programs it and other information on how it is to be sewn into the computer. The design comes up on a screen, filling in color as it sews so that she can see the work in progress on it as well as the actual stitching taking place under the needle.

"I have over 4,000 designs to choose from," said Mrs. Buffington, spreading out stacks of catalogues with logos and design inside. She purchases the right to reproduce the designs. Mrs. Buffington said she can also reproduce original pictures and logos and even photographs of people and animals. Just five days after she requests a design to be set onto disk it is made and ready to run.

Today Mrs. Buffington sews about 300 items a week. She said she begins working early in the morning and sometimes doesn't stop until after 9 p.m. Her two daughters Cheryl and Betsy often help her. She is excited about her work, and it shows. "It is just so rewarding to start with blank fabric, then see the finished product when it is done," she said.

"Not long ago I was looking through a magazine and I saw a picture of the Maryland Junior Holstein members leaning on a fence," Mrs. Buffington said. "They had their backs to the camera and they all had my jackets on, with the Holsteins showing. It was exciting to see my work like that!"

Mrs. Buffington has sewn personalized jackets, backs of captain's chairs, hats, shirts, black belts, blankets, towels, lap-warmers and more for more organizations than she can name. She has produced work for Derrwyn Farms, Big Springs Farm, Himes Custom Farming, Pop's Farm, Bowman's, Peace & Plenty, Golden Meadows Farms, the Maryland Brown Swiss Association, the Maryland Holstein Association, R.J. Rodeo Associates, Maryland Jersey Association, University of Maryland's Partners in Education Program, country music singers, and Hydes Taxidermy Service, just to name a few.

"I've learned a lot," Mrs. Buffington said with a smile. Her eyes sparkled as she told about the time a gentleman called and asked her if she had any designs of limousines. "I said yes," she recalled. "Waiting for him to arrive I got out my books and pulled out all of the limousine designs I had. When he arrived he looked at the catalogues and shook his head. 'Maybe I should have made myself more clear,' he said, 'I was talking about cows!'"

Mrs. Buffington pored over the books again and found, to her own surprise, that she did have several Limousine cow designs. "Low, and behold, one of them was just what he was looking for," she remembered, "and he had jackets made!"

From cows in pastures and barns, to cows on shirts and jackets, Mrs. Buffington's lifestyle has taken a whole new turn. But there's no need to worry. It seems she has her future all sewn up!

Formerly Betty Buffington milked cows; now, she stitches them from morning to night. Seeing her work—such as the Maryland Junior Holstein jackets—pictured in magazines fills her with pride.

OLD-FASHIONED CRACKER PUDDING

4 tablespoons butter
7 cups milk
1¼ cups sugar
28 soda crackers (2-inch square)
4 eggs
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup milk
2 cups coconut (optional)
1 tablespoon vanilla

Melt butter. Add milk, sugar, and soda crackers. Bring to a boil. Beat together eggs, cornstarch, and milk, and add slowly to hot mixture. Bring to boil again. Add coconut and vanilla.

My parents are Marlin and Mary Jane Musser. I have two brothers, Jay, 13 and Jerald, 6, and one sister, Joy, 9.

I'm the oldest child, 15. On our farmette we have one steer, Sammy, for our own beef; 10 chickens for our own eggs; and one cat, Penny.

Some of my hobbies are reading (the B section of Lancaster Farming included), writing, typing, sewing, cross-stitching, bike-riding . . . and more! Our whole family enjoys this pudding, so naturally it never lasts long!

CRAB QUICHE WITH ASPARAGUS

1½ cups shredded cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons flour
1¼ cups half and half
4 eggs, beaten
6 ounces crab or imitation crab, flaked
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon minced dry onion
10-inch unbaked pie shell
1 cup cooked asparagus, well drained.

Toss cheese with flour. Add half and half, eggs, crab, asparagus, and seasonings. Mix well. Pour into pastry shell. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour until firm and slightly browned.

My husband Scott and I live on a farmette in Brunnerville. We have a little boy named Carson who keeps us stepping.

We have five dairy goats, one dog, and three cats. We enjoy the mountains and have a small cabin on the Chesapeake Bay.

When I am not busy with life's most important job, taking care of our son, I am in my perennial flower gardens, doing crafts, and best of all, cooking!

Sharon Rehm Lititz

MACARONI BAKE

¾ pound ground beef
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup onion, chopped

Brown meat and onion. Add:

1 cup tomato paste
½ cup mayonnaise

Set aside.

Put in saucepan:

2 cups milk
2 eggs, beaten

Thicken with ¼ cup flour and a little more milk (as you would thicken gravy). DO NOT BOIL. Add 1 cup grated cheese. Stir until cheese melts, but DO NOT BOIL.

Cook 3 cups elbow macaroni. Mix cheese sauce with cooked macaroni.

Put layers of macaroni mix in 9x13-inch baking dish, then the meat mixture, then rest of macaroni on top. Sprinkle cheese on top and bake for 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

(Put foil on top for at least 15 minutes to prevent macaroni from getting hard.)

This recipe is great for taking to picnics and potlucks. It is also great for those who are not crazy about plain macaroni and cheese.

I live in Nisbet, Lycoming County, with my husband, Rob and our 9-month-old son, Brock. We live on part of the family farm. Rob drives truck for Agway and farms part-time with his father and uncle.

I am a legal secretary. We both grew up on the farm and would never live anywhere else.

I am a former dairy princess and I still promote the dairy industry by eating dairy products, living on the farm, and helping with the local dairy princess pageant and activities.

This dessert is delicious and simple to make.

BLUEBERRY SOUR CREAM MUFFINS

1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup milk
½ cup sour cream
1 cup fresh blueberries

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Cream first four ingredients. In a separate bowl, sift flour and baking powder together. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk and sour cream.

Fold in blueberries. Spoon into greased muffin tin or bake cups and sprinkle with crumb topping.

Topping:

⅓ cup butter
⅓ cup brown sugar
⅓ cup flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Bake 20-25 minutes.

I love this recipe. It's great for after-school snacks or a special treat for a visit with a friend or new mom. I always keep several quarts of blueberries in my freezer for recipes just like this. I always have sour cream on hand — it can be whipped up quickly.

My family consists of three growing boys, ages 8, 6, and 3. My husband works full time for UPS and I am a homemaker. We reside outside of Columbia on a four-acre farmette. Even though we are not farming full-time, we do enjoy the country life and have a big garden that we enjoy working in as a family.

APRICOT STRUDEL

8-ounce package cream cheese
1 cup butter
2½ cups flour
18-ounce jar apricot preserves
½ cup chopped pecans
3 tablespoons brown sugar
½ cup flake coconut
¾ teaspoon cinnamon

Cream the cheese and butter in large mixer bowl. Add flour and mix well. Chill mixture for one hour. Divide dough into three equal parts. Roll out one at a time on a floured board. Spread ⅓ of preserves, cinnamon, brown sugar, nuts, and coconut on each.

Bake for 1 hour at 350 degrees (watch carefully, because you may need to lower the temperature and bake a little longer).

Cut strudel while warm.

This is an old recipe from a family friend, shared by my mother-in-law. It's a nice treat to eat one strudel now, share one, and freeze one for later (or hide one for later), if it last's that long. . . .

1 large apple, grated

Measure all ingredients into a large bowl. Mix. Bake in three 8-inch cake pans at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes. Prepare filling; spread between layers.

1½ cups milk
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup raisins
1 cup coconut

In a saucepan, combine the first five ingredients. Cook until thickened. Add nuts, raisins, and coconut. Spread between cake layers.

Caramel Icing:

I first made this cake for my brother's birthday and we liked it so well I have made it several times since. We like it just plain, without the filling and icing. We live on a hog farm and have around 100 sows.

REALLY ENJOYABLE EGG NOG

2 quarts milk (may use skim)
¾ cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
4 eggs or 8-ounces egg substitute
Whites from 2 large eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup evaporated milk (may use skim)

Put milk, ¾ cup sugar, and nutmeg into 3-4 quart saucepan. Stir over medium heat until bubbles appear around edge. Remove from heat.

In medium-sized bowl, whisk eggs or substitute with 2 egg whites until blended. Gradually whisk in 2 cups hot milk mixture. Pour back into saucepan. Stir over medium-low heat for about 8 minutes until mixture is just under the boiling point (200 degrees) and is slightly thickened.

Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla. Refrigerate at least two hours.

One hour before serving: Pour evaporated milk into a small bowl and place in freezer 45 minutes or until it starts to freeze around edges. Beat with electric mixer until foamy. Add 2 tablespoons sugar and beat 5 minutes until stiff peaks form. Fold into eggnog. Pour into punch bowl. Dust with nutmeg. Makes 3 quarts or 24 ½ cup servings.

We enjoy dairy products, and although we are not very conscientious about limiting our intake of cholesterol and fats, this recipe is suitable for those who do.

FRUIT DIP

7 ounces marshmallow cream
8 ounces cream cheese
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 cup sour cream
8 ounces whipped cream topping

Several tablespoons strawberry jam (optional), more or less to your taste.

Mix the marshmallow cream, cream cheese, confectioners' sugar, and sour cream until smooth, then add whipped cream topping and chill.

For fruit, add bananas, pineapples, kiwis, grapes, apples, strawberries, etc.

This is my favorite fruit dip recipe that I've tasted. It's another one of my many recipes that come from my mother. It makes a very attractive dish and has always been a great hit. My family raves about it.

My husband Merv and I live on a farm in the beautiful hills of Juniata County. We operate a 127,000-layer chicken house and farm 225 acres of corn, soybeans, alfalfa, wheat, and oats. Merv also does custom corn planting.

We are already enjoying the help of our children, especially our oldest son Jason, who will be 9 years old in a few weeks, followed by Ann Merlene, 6, Anthony, 4, and Susan, 2½.

I enjoy reading Section B of Lancaster Farming. My favorite is Homestead Notes and Joyce Bupp's column.

3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ cup shortening
1¼ cup milk
3 eggs
12-ounce bag chocolate chips (finely chopped)

Chocolate Chip Glaze:

If you like chocolate, be sure to try a piece of this cake. This is a new recipe for me. The secretary at work made this cake for the boss's birthday party. It was delicious so, of course, I had to have the recipe.

I am working at R.H. Mast Greenhouse where I am around flowers a lot! So, I've got colorful scenery.

BAKED ALASKA

Pound or sponge cake
4 egg whites
¼ cup confectioners' sugar
Finely chopped nut meats, optional

Place wax paper on bottom of 8- or 9-inch cake or pie pan. Place a one-inch layer of sponge or pound cake on the paper. Place ice cream on the cake — the cake should extend ¼ inch beyond the ice cream. (Form the ice cream into a mound for a striking effect).

Cover completely with a thick coating of meringue made by beating to a stiff consistency 4 egg whites, then folding in gradually ¼ cup confectioners' sugar. The meringue needs to be light and dry. Set in a 475-500 degree oven long enough to brown meringue. May be dusted with nut meats prior to placing in oven.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon vanilla

Work butter until creamy. Heat in sugar and eggs one at a time. When creamy, fill in flour with spoon.

This is a very old recipe, a family favorite.

3 tablespoons butter
2½ cup macaroni (do not cook)
4 cups milk
1 cup cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper to taste

We have a 185-acre dairy farm in Snyder County. We milk 50 cows. Our daughters Janelle, 11 and Danielle, 6 help with the chores. They have bunnies, sheep, cats, dogs, and a goat they have to take care of.

This recipe is a favorite of our family. It's so easy to make since you don't cook the macaroni before baking. I have given this recipe to many friends and family members.

ICE CREAM DELIGHT

½ gallon vanilla ice cream
1 cup shredded coconut
⅔ cup light brown sugar
2 cups crushed Rice Chex
½ cup chopped nuts
⅓ cup melted butter

Mix everything well but the ice cream. Put ⅔ of the mixture into an 8- by 8-inch cake pan. Place softened ice cream over the entire surface. Put remaining mixture on top. Return to freezer until ready to serve.

My husband Ben and I both grew up on farms. One of our memories is the early morning chore of milking the cows. We still consider ourselves farmers, even though the only farming we do is our small vegetable garden.

Open the smaller can and stir the ice cream. Reclose. Add more ice and rock salt to large can. Roll another 10 minutes. Enjoy.

STRAWBERRY DELIGHT

1 large box strawberry Jell-O
1 pint frozen strawberries
4 mashed bananas
1½ cup boiling water
1 can crushed pineapple
1 pint sour cream

GOLDEN CHEESE BROCCOLI CHOWDER

2 cups water
1 cup celery, chopped
1 cup carrots, chopped
½ cup onion, chopped
1 pound fresh broccoli, washed and chopped

Cheese sauce:
½ cup butter
½ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt or to taste
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 cups milk
1 pound Velveeta cheese, cut in ½ inch cubes or 4 cups grated cheddar cheese
2 cups ham, cut in ½ inch cubes

In large kettle, combine water, celery, carrots, and onion. Bring to boil; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, for about 5 minutes or until tender. Add broccoli; cook until broccoli is tender, about 5 minutes (to keep broccoli bright green, leave the cover slightly ajar). Do not drain vegetables.

To make sauce, melt butter in large saucepan; blend in flour, salt, and pepper. Cook, stirring, for 1 minute. Stir in milk; cook until thickened. Stir in the cheese and cool until melted; add the ham cubes. Combine cheese mixture with undrained vegetables. Serves 12.

This is a favorite dish of most of us in our family. Each of the children seems to have one vegetable they aren't too fond of, but generally don't complain, as long as I vary the menu.

I'm the mother of 1 girl and 4 boys ranging in age from 2-13 years. After living in Iowa for 7 years on a beef, hog, and crop farm, we moved back to Pennsylvania last spring. My husband died after a short battle with cancer and I felt the need to be close to family and friends.

My children and I now live on my dad's farm and help him with fieldwork. I feel truly blessed to have the opportunity to give my children a chance to still experience farm life and work.

Investment In 4-H Sets Reiff On Career Track

Sheep Judging Champion Racks Up Full Scholarship

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

STRASBURG (Lancaster Co.) — Lisa Reiff has been in the news for showing champion sheep throughout the county and at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. People have read about her being a member of the county 4-H Livestock Judging team that took national honors in competition.

Now the 18-year-old has captured another honor. She has been awarded a full college scholarship for her livestock judging abilities.

According to Chet Hughes, Lancaster extension livestock agent, Lisa is the first and only person in Pennsylvania to receive a scholarship for her judging abilities.

This award has opened up a whole new window of opportunity for Lisa, who was accepted and had been planning to attend Penn State University and now is headed to Dodge City Community College in Kansas.

"I found out that Midwestern colleges recruit students for livestock judging teams just like they recruit students to play football in the East," Lisa said.

Livestock judging in the Midwest, according to Lisa, attracts as much public attention as football or baseball playing does in this area. She also found out that in the Midwest, students attend community college that have livestock judging teams the first two years. If the student does well in competition, he or she is then recruited by a university for the final two years of judging competition.

The agent who recruited Lisa said that the idea to recruit an outstanding livestock judging member in the East was a novel idea that came to him while reading about Lancaster County's judging team in a national sheep magazine.

After reading the article, the agent contacted Hughes, who in addition to being a county extension agent coached the judging team. Hughes sent the team members' names and addresses to the agent, who contacted Lisa, the only high school senior on the team.

Not only did the idea to have free college tuition appeal to Lisa but also the opportunity to travel to contests all over the country.

"San Franciso, Denver, Texas, and Louiville are some of the places where the team competes," Lisa said.

Livestock team members practice every afternoon during the fall judging season, Lisa said. She has all morning classes so her schedule can accommodate the strenous judging practices. Although she must attend all the practice sessions, Lisa will not be able to compete during her freshman year.

"It's a rule they have. You can't compete until your second year," Lisa said.

About 1,700 full-time students attend Dodge City Community College, which is in the city but near to the agriculture area of the Midwest.

"Farming is so different out there. You see massive feedlots for cattle everywhere," Lisa said.

Since Dodge City is a two-year college, Lisa thought she'd finish her degree requirements at Penn State. But the Dodge City College adviser told her to keep her options open. He said, "If you do good on the judging team, you'll find other universities at your doorstep waiting to recruit you."

Lisa will be taking math and business courses to earn a degree in accounting.

Lisa and her brother Lyndon have the distinction of winning every major sheep championship in the county for five years between 1990-1995. Her dream to show the grand champion sheep at the Pennsylvania Farm Show became a reality in January.

"Farm Show was the biggest highlight this year," Lisa said. "I put more energy into that than anything else. I was really committed to exercising that lamb every day."

It sold for $1,800.

With so many accomplishments in her life, people tend to think that Lisa has been lucky. But she said, "People forget I didn't start at the top. I showed sheep four or five years before winning anything. And, I did really lousy in livestock judging the first couple of years. Actually, it wasn't until my senior year that things really started to come together."

Her parents think that Lisa's secret for winning lies in the fact that she stuck to sheep and livestock judging rather than be involved in a multitude of activities.

"I would have liked to be in sports at school, but I had to chose between sports and 4-H if I wanted to do a good job. I'm glad I chose 4-H because now it's paying college," Lisa said.

"Sometimes livestock judging was really frustrating, but it was worth it. Even if we hadn't won nationals, it would have been worth it. I made friendships that will last a lifetime."

Lisa said that judging requires a lot of time. But it's really the team effort that wins. She is grateful her team really worked well together.

"But without the coaches, I wouldn't be where I am today," she said of Chet Hughes, Greg Musser, and Fred Weaver.

Lisa has two lambs to show at the National Rib Cookoff and the county 4-H roundup before heading off for college August 15. While she is eager to attend an out-of-state school, she is also a bit apprehensive because it's so far from family and friends.

Maybe Lisa won't get homesick, but her parents know their life will change when Lisa heads for the West. They have been extremely supportive in sheep showing and 4-H. Although her dad Leroy will continue to lead the 4-H Woolies Club and served as chairman for the 4-H roundup they know that the house will be empty without Lisa and her friends. Laura, Lisa's mom, said, "Leroy asked me the other day if we should start bawling now?"

While home, Lisa also took responsibility for most of the cleaning and meal preparation since her mother works as a manager for a restaurant.

"I guess I'll need to hire a cleaning lady and make my own supper," her mother said.

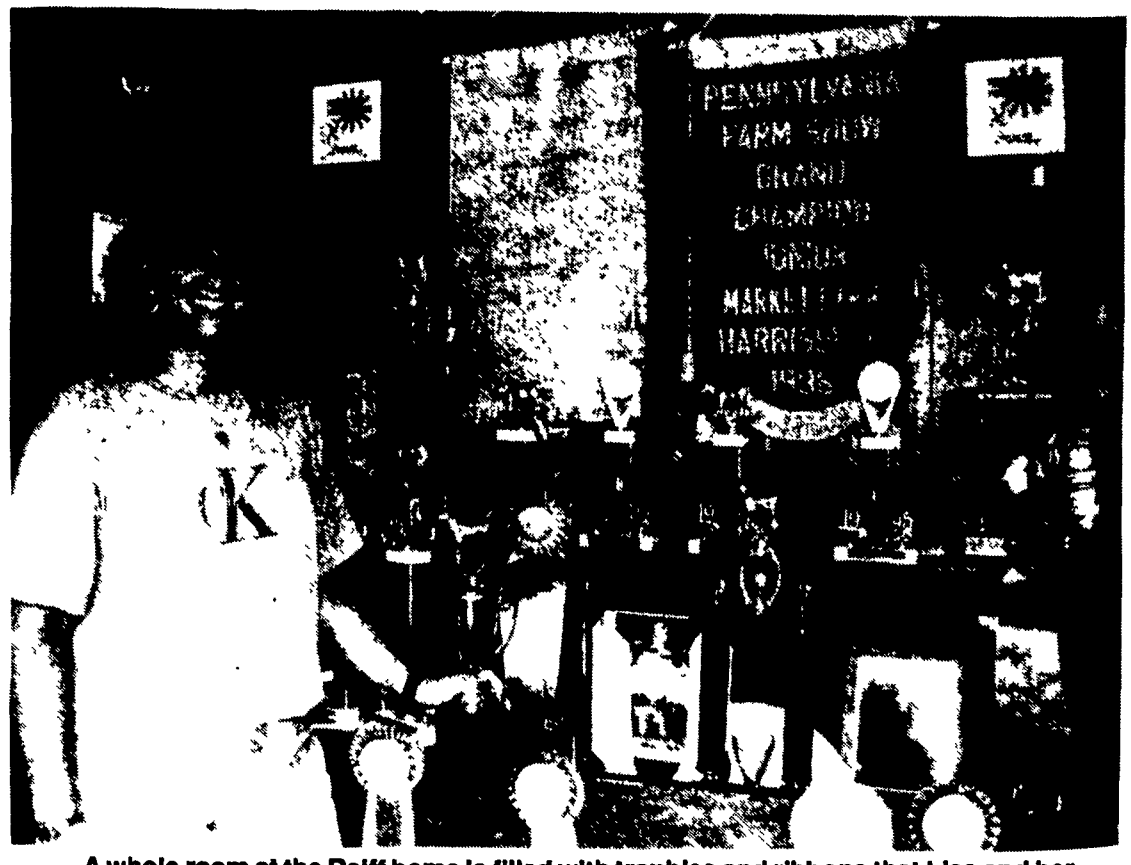
Lisa's two older brothers, Leroy Jr. and Lyndon, are married and no longer live at home.

Lisa, who has been banking her winnings for college, purchased a 1993 Cavalier since her tuition is paid. Although she will fly to Kansas with her parents, her brother, who is a truck driver, will transport her car to the college.

"I'm very fortunate," Lisa said of the full scholarship. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. I want to really encourage younger kids to hang in there (4-H) even when you aren't winning. I want them to know that I didn't always do well in the beginning, but I didn't give up."

With so many accomplishments in her life, people tend to think that Lisa has been lucky. But she said, "People forget I didn't start at the top. I showed sheep four or five years before winning anything. And, I did really lousy in livestock judging the first couple of years."

Lisa and her mother Laura review information from Dodge City Community College in Kansas, where Lisa has received a full scholarship for her sheep judging abilities. According to Lisa, livestock judging in the Midwest commands as much attention and respect as football and baseball do in the East. Colleges compete to recruit top achievers on the judging teams. As far as can be determined, this is the first time that a full college scholarship for livestock judging has been offered to a Pennsylvanian.



A whole room at the Reiff home is filled with trophies and ribbons that Lisa and her brother Lyndon won by showing sheep in the county and at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Plus, Lisa said, "we have boxes of ribbons and trophies stored away because there isn't room to display them."

Dairy Collectible Afghan Is Berks Fundraiser

MOHRSVILLE (Berks Co.) — The Berks County Promotion Committee is selling afghans as a fundraiser. Called the Berks County Dairy Collectible Afghan, it features all dairy breeds found in Berks County: Holsteins, Milking Shorthorns, Guernsey, Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, and Jersey. Also in the four corners are shapes of Berks County with either a milk can or real seal found in the shape of the county. Also written on the picture is a bible verse segment taken from Exodus 3:8, "A land flowing with milk and honey."

The afghan measures about 47x67-inches and is made of 100 percent cotton. It is available in three colors, Williamsburg blue, cranberry, and hunter green.

If ordered before June 30, the afghan costs $40. After June 30, it is $45. Shipping and handling requires an additional $5.

Profits will be used to help support the Berks County Dairy Princess Program.

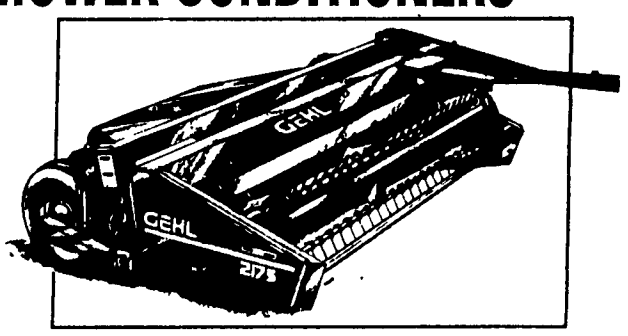
GEHL®

COMMON SENSE MOWER CONDITIONERS



Gehl mower conditioners are "common sense" machines because they're packed with sensible features.

- Full-width intermeshing conditioning rolls with intermittent ribs deliver thorough, uniform conditioning.
- Simple sickle drive with pivot-arm design provides more cutting force.
- Fewer moving parts than competitive models for worry-free performance.
- Three-point flotation support protects the cutterbar from rocks and uneven terrain.
- 9'3" cutting width.

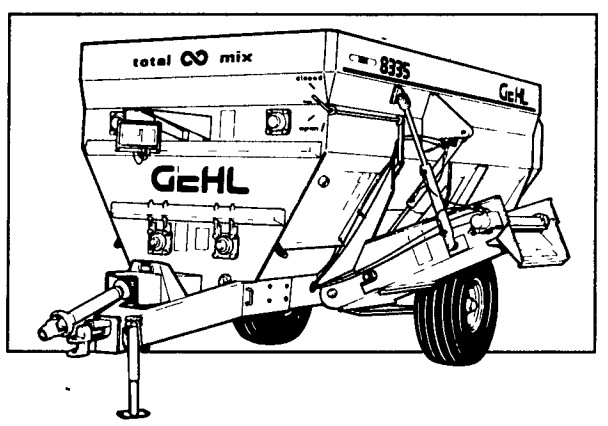
TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



Total Mix TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long stemmed hay into your ration up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content

- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities

Purina Sponsors Pork Leadership Conference

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — More than 30 youths from 28 states will receive a comprehensive overview of the pork industry, including information on pork promotion and research this summer.

The young people will attend the 8th annual Pork Leadership Institute on July 11-16 in Des Moines and Washington, D.C. This five-day conference is sponsored by Purina Mills and the National Pork Producers Council, in association with the National Pork Board.

"This unique learning experience symbolizes our commitment to help prepare young people for leadership positions in agribusiness," said Glenn Shields, swine business group director for Purina Mills. "These men and women will return home with a better understanding of the issues facing the industry."

Topics for study and discussion at this year's Institute include the environment, foreign trade, The Pork Quality Assurance Program℠, and Taste What's Next™ advertising promotion campaign. The conference will include trips to Iowa State University, a nearby pork producer and to Capitol Hill in Washington.

The 34 young people in this year's program were selected by the pork producer associations in their home states. Since the Pork Leadership Institute program began, 228 young people have participated in the conferences, and promoted the industry to thousands more.

Monster Truck On Display At Dealership

COLUMBIA (Lancaster Co.) — The legendary Ford "Bigfoot®," the five-time world champion of monster truck racing, roars into Chapman Ford in Columbia, for a three-day display and ground pounding car crush.

Known around the world as "The Original Monster Truck®," this is the newest edition of Bigfoot, celebrating the release of the all-new 1997 Ford F-150 pickup trucks. The truck will be on display June 27-29 at Chapman Ford on Columbia Ave.

The new '97 Ford Bigfoot is one of 16 racing, exhibition, and display vehicles that have carried the Bigfoot name over more than 20 years. This includes six computer-designed winners of tubular chassis race trucks, winners of monster truck racing championships in 1990, and winners of four straight championships from 1991-1995.

Bigfoot and the entire monster truck phenomenon were started by Bob and Marilyn Chandler, in St. Louis, Mo., in the mid-'70s. Chandler, a construction contractor, owned a Ford F-250 4x4 pickup truck. Chandler used his tough Ford truck on the job and for off-road family fun on the weekends. But he found many ways to break even the toughest of trucks.

He discovered there was no place in the Midwest to get four wheel drive parts and service. Recognizing a potential market, Chandler and his wife, Marilyn, left the construction business to start Midwest Four Wheel Drive. They still used their Ford 4x4 as a work truck, and partly as a promotional tool for the new business. They tried out new parts on the truck, and kept making it bigger and better, always a step (or two) ahead of everyone else. Soon the truck itself became an attraction. In 1979, it made its first paid appearance at a Denver car show. Truck pulls in arenas and stadiums soon followed.

Then, in 1981, Chandler tried something that forever changed the monster truck concept. He decided, just for fun, to see if he could drive Bigfoot over a couple of junk cars. A few months later, he duplicated the stunt in a stadium show. The rest is history.

Record Earnings

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA, reported a net income of $949,000 for the quarter, an increase of $416,000 or 78 percent compared to an income of $533,000 for the quarter ended the same period in 1995.

The improved earnings over the same period last year are primarily the result of the favorable impact to the association by the consolidation of the Farm Credit Bank of Columbia and the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore on April 1, 1995, to create AgFirst Farm Credit Bank.

Total loan volume on March 31, 1996, was $198.4 million, a 2.8 percent decrease from year end. Robert T. Reich, chief executive officer and president, Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA, said, "Loan volume through the first quarter was slightly below expectations. Farmers continued to be cautious about extending their debt positions due in part to the uncertainties witnessed in milk and feed prices, and the new farm bill. However, we foresee that programs contained in the farm bill should result in increased loan demand as private sector financing replaces funds previously provided through commodity credit nonrecourse loans and deficiency payment advances.

"Competition continues to be keen," said Reich. "Our patronage program and competitive rates, however, make the association the lender of choice for agricultural credit in northeastern Pa.

Dealer Facility Welcomes Community At Grand Opening

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Not for sales, but to allow the community to walk through the new building. That's why Landis Bros. Inc., has scheduled a "We Welcome You" grand opening celebration tomorrow, Sunday, June 23, from 2 to 6 p.m. at their new location seven miles west of Lancaster along Route 283 at the Mt. Joy-Manheim exit.

"We have serviced the Lancaster County community since 1920," Herb Noll, general manager said. "We just wanted to give everyone the opportunity to see the new facility. We think maybe people will like to take a Sunday afternoon drive after church and stop in to see us. We want to have refreshments and have a good time visiting with our friends."

The special celebration is one year to the day from the time of groundbreaking for the new 28,250 sq. ft. building. Located on a nine-acre site, the new building combines open space visibility in its first floor retail area, with a smooth work flow in the spacious service areas. The building has been planned to provide optimal customer service with good working conditions for the employees.

Landis Bros., Inc., is unique in that they have limited themselves to one major brand, John Deere. But they are diversified in that they serve farmers, building contractors, homeowners for lawn and garden equipment, and commercial groundskeepers.

In addition, a major part of their business comes from repair service. They service not only what they sell but also farm, construction and grounds equipment from other users as well. No seasonal employees are hired because special shop promotions, along with the need to repair farm machinery in summer and snow removal equipment in winter, has made repair service necessary all year.

Cranes have been placed in the work areas so that they have plenty of headroom to work on used equipment and to assemble new machinery.

"Farmers seem to have a very good attitude and are pleased to have us out here in the country," Noll said. "They are drirving tractors in to be worked on, and this gives us a lot of service business.

"We have had an excellent spring selling season, especially on hay tools. John Deere targeted these products to gain additional market share so we were able to write a lot of business on mower-conditioners and hay balers. The medium- size tractor market for farm and grounds care is also very strong."

"We have always tried to welcome everyone," Noll said. "We want to give the personal touch. That's why we called it the 'We Welcome You' grand opening celebration. Our employees will be here to host the visitors, and this will fit right into our business phi-

Dekalb Develops Seeds Of Future

DEKALB, Ill. — Three factors have many ag industry watchers predicting this year could be pivotal for America's farmers.

A new farm bill has freed up more acreage for planting. Corn and soybean prices are currently at record highs, while inventories have plummeted to an all time low.

Finally, after years of costly government and private research, farmers will soon get access to bioengineered transgenic seeds with built-in resistance to a variety of insects and herbicides. Together these three dynamics have many farmers cautiously optimistic about what the future may bring.

Perhaps the biggest development growers are watching carefully is the explosion of new patents being announced by seed companies such as Dekalb Genetics Corporation. Dekalb is playing an industry leading role in introducing hybrids with insect and herbicide resistance. Among these new insect resistant corn hybrids are ones with built-in resistance to the European Corn Borer, which costs farmers an estimated $1.2 billion in losses annually.

Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) is a naturally occurring soil bacterium used to control insect pests. In 1990, Dekalb scientists were the first to successfully insert a Bt gene, which is especially effective in preventing corn borer feeding, into a viable corn plant.

Since then, several companies, including Dekalb, have been developing commercial corn borer resistant hybrids with the Bt gene. Meanwhile, the near-record corn borer populations of 1995 only served to heighten corn growers' anticipation of the release of these hybrids. University research indicates that yield losses to corn borer feeding can exceed 20 percent during peak population years.

According to Bruce Bickner, Dekalb chairman and chief executive officer, the company's patent announcement is very significant, because "It establishes Dekalb as a key biotech player with long-range capability to deliver even more new-generation genetic products to our customers."

Germania Becomes Distributor

WAUNAKEE, Wis. — Germania Dairy Automation, Inc., Waunakee, and S.A.E. Afikim, Israel, announced the signing of a letter of intent establishing an exclusive distributorship area.

The agreement allows Germania dealers to market the Afikim product line throughout the United States and Canada.

"The Afikim product line represents the third leg of our product strategy, including the Germania and RoKa product lines," said Rolf Reisgies, Germania Dairy Automation president. "This strategy is to offer a complete parlor program to our network of over 85 dealers. This, in turn, allows them to better meet our customers' needs."

Germania Dairy Automation manufactures and distributes automatic milking parlors in the United States, Canada, Saudi Arabia, Japan and Europe.

S.A.E. Afikim is a world leader in the field of electronic milk meters and computerized dairy management systems.

losophy that calls for us to meet the needs of a wide group of people. We are always looking to see if we are adequately staffed because when people call on the phone or when they come into the parts department or showroom, they don't want to wait.

Earlier this year Landis Bros. Inc., had their yearly "John Deere Day" in January for farmers and an April lawn and garden open house with the John Deere Nascar. Now they want to invite the whole community. In addition to the Sunday schedule, the celebration is open to the public today from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. and all next week through Saturday, June 29, with grand opening specials of 20 percent off many instore items. This special discount applies to both the Lebanon location on Evergreen Road and the new location at 2710 Mt. Joy Road.

"We depend on our customers for our future, and we want to offer products of good value at good price. This is our way to say thank-you to the community," Noll said.

Product Moves To Next Round In EU

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Ciba Seeds, a division of Ciba-Geigy Corporation, received notification that its dossier supporting market placement of Maximizer™ hybrid corn in the European Union (EU) has been forwarded to the Council of Ministers for the third phase of the EU approval process.

Although the majority of votes given in the second phase were in favor of approval, the qualified majority that would have brought automatic approval could not be reached; several countries representing one-third of the total votes abstained.

Maximizer, which received full approval in the US in 1995, is commonly referred to as Bt corn; it has built-in control of the European corn borer, an insect pest which causes more than $1 billion in crop losses per year. The EU Council of Minister's decision on Maximizer should be known well before harvest.

Around 75 percent of US corn is consumed domestically and EU countries purchase only a small percentage of US export corn, according to USDA figures. Regardless, Ciba Seeds is confident that outstanding issues can be resolved prior to the 1996 harvest season.

"We know that our date package supports the approval of Maximizer corn," said Fred Fuller, president, Ciba Seeds. "We have already met some of the world's toughest safety and environmental standards."

Maximizer was the first to receive approval from the US EPA, FDA and USDA to market and sell transgenic hybrid seed corn.

Ag Equipment Companies Merge

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. — J-Star Industries, Inc. of Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin and Roto-Mix, Inc. of Dodge City, Kan. have announced a merger of the two companies.

According to John Neill, president of J-Star, and Ben Neier, president of Roto-Mix, the merger evolved from independent studies conducted by each company, tracking the current and future paths of the livestock feed mixer industry.

According to Neill, "When talks began several months ago, it became apparent that each of us could benefit by joining forces. J-Star needed established retail distribution west of the Missouri River and Roto-Mix needed a way to expand into the eastern half of the U.S."

Roto-Mix will operate as a separate division of J-Star and remain headquartered in Dodge City, Kan., with operations at their 35,000 square foot Dodge City plant and 52,000 square foot Hoisington, Kan. facility.

Fly-In To Focus On Livestock Issues

DENVER, Colo. — Livestock producers from throughout the country will travel to Washington, D.C. June 23-26 to meet with members of Congress and Clinton administration officials about concentration in the livestock sectors and other areas impacting their industry, such as transportation and credit.

National Farmers Union's (NFU) legislative fly-in is aimed at focusing attention on the economic crisis facing livestock producers. Many cattle producers have seen their market prices drop by as much as 50 percent over the past two years.

"This grassroots fly-in will enable livestock producers to directly communicate their concerns and ideas for change with U.S. lawmakers and rule makers," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "NFU has long held that the concentration of livestock processing companies is detrimental to producer prices and provides no price advantage for consumers."

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, four companies now account for 87 percent of all red meat slaughter and processing. By comparison, these four firms had roughly 70 percent of all red meat business in the early 1980s. In addition, data from the Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration show that 300 feedlots account for 82 percent of all marketing transactions, 89 percent of packer-fed transactions, and 56 percent of forward contracts.

The NFU legislative fly-in comes on the heels of last week's release of a report by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's 21-member Advisory Committee on Agricultural Concentration. Fly-in participants are expected to voice their support for recommendations within the report which they believe will enhance economic opportunities for livestock producers.

Committee recommendations expected to receive the most attention are increased monitoring and enforcement of anti-trust regulations, establishment of a disclosure policy on captive supplies, more timely and accurate information on price and volume of imports and exports, better reporting and more accurate information on the farm-to-retail price spread, and enhancement of cooperative and bargaining entities to improve economic returns for independent producers. Farmers Union is also supportive of recommendations to maintain competitive transportation alternatives, as well as monitoring and limitation of transportation rates by the Surface Transportation Board, where there is little or no competition.

Special attention will also be drawn to the committee's minority report which calls for the prohibition of packers from feeding livestock, termination of loans on formula contracts as presently constituted, and value-based pricing based on verifiable market factors outside the control of the packer/buyer and applied uniformly to producers.

"The commission report, particularly the minority report, should be a basis of 'new thinking' for people in Washington," said Swenson. "The economic survival of independent producers and their communities is at stake."

Shelled Corn
Poured Concrete
No Used Silos!
No Rebuilt Silos!
No Preowned Silos!!

The Summer and Fall of 1995???? The extreme heat, the early dry-down of the corn crop, and then the rapid rise in corn prices? And those corn prices are having a dramatic effect on your profits in 1996.

"THE NEED FOR QUALITY FEED AND GRAIN STORAGE IS GREATER TODAY THAN AT ANY TIME IN RECENT HISTORY!"

How can we help to make sure that you get a quality corn storage unit constructed before the expected rush in August and September?

Give us a call to discuss early discounts, financing, and unloader options.

Before spending a lot of money to dry, store, handle, and transport your corn crop, you will do well to consider the many advantages of a poured concrete silo to store and protect your valuable corn.

Also, by storing hi-moisture shelled corn (about 25% moisture), you save field losses, and increase digestibility.

42 Cow Tie Stall Barn - Leola, PA

Lapp's Barn Equipment can install a high-performance/high efficiency tunnel ventilation system in your barn. A tunnel ventilation system will give you an even air flow throughout your barn of 2-5 mph. This gives you the advantage of better controlling temperature to give your cows more comfort which means more milk!! Also, a tunnel ventilation system eliminates circulating fans, provides summer and winter ventilation and controls fly problems! An optional unit can even automate your ventilation so you will never even have to worry about it when you're not there, so you can concentrate on other things!
At Lapp's, we sell high quality ventilation systems manufactured by Acme Engineering, Acme products feature such things as:

- Galvanized Construction
- Wide Cambered Propeller
- Rivited Blades
- Unique Captured Bearings
- Vertical Support Frame

You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment... but it can cost you more!

Equipment cost is not the only cost of cooling milk

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

Example	Mueller	Competition
Cost of equipment	$41,000	$28,000
Cost of electricity @ .06 kW for 12,000 lbs milk day for 10 years	$17,550	$22,850
Total operating cost for ten years	$58,550	$50,850
Savings	$ 2,300

Mother Nature Meets Her Match

Let's face it–Mother Nature can be pretty hard on that beautiful new deck you just installed. But if you install a BROCK DECK System you can keep your deck looking new and outwit Mother Nature.

Available in tan, white and gray, BROCK DECK cuts just like wood so the design possibilities are endless. But unlike wood BROCK DECK planks and railings are made of environmentally friendly Hi Polymer PVC. They last years longer than wood and never need stain, paint or sealant.

Get the deck that you can smile about even when Mother Nature is at her worst–BROCK DECK Systems.

we could control the weather?

Well, we can't so we must do everything we can to keep the weather conditions from getting the best of our profits. When the temperature goes into the upper 80's and 90's, the stress level on your cows is significantly increased. Usually that stress shows up with lower milk production and increased reproduction problems. Often SSC increases, too.

Our clients who use Pro-Ficient and Pro-Ficient II regularly report that their cows hold up better during the summer heat. Some people think that Fastrack or Probios are the same as our products. That just isn't so. In addition to the live (Viable) Naturally Occurring Microorganisms in our products, Pro-Ficient has Niacin and Cobalt, and Pro-Ficient II contains Natural Source Vitamin E, Selenium, Zinc, and Copper. Natural Source Vitamin E comes from vegetable oil (not petroleum like the synthetic substitute). One study has shown the body absorbs Natural Source Vitamin E better than the synthetic. It was found that there was 5.3 times more Natural source Vitamin E than synthetic Vitamin E in the brains, 3.6 times more in the red blood cells, 2.6 times more in the plasma, 1.9 times more in the hearts, and 1.7 times more in the muscles of experimental animals.

None of the other probiotic type products on the market today include any of the additional ingredients our products have. In most cases Pro-Ficient and Pro-Ficient II cost 1 or 2 cents less per day than the plain products, and Pro-Ficient and Pro-Ficient II offer many more benefits than the plain products.

Pro-Ficient works best with corn silage and with hay or haylage that have more grass in them. Pro-Ficient II works best with alfalfa forages or with heat damaged forages. It also works well when high levels of iron are present in the water or in the forages. When you choose Proficient or Proficient II, you choose the only product of its kind in the market place.

Do all you can to keep your high producing cows high producers this summer! Order your Pro-Ficient or Pro-Ficient II today.

Caterpillars Become Butterflies That All Enjoy

Yes, even if you do nothing at all in your garden this summer, butterflies will still pass through your yard. But, with a little effort you can encourage them to stay, rear their young, and multiply. Your garden will become alive with butterflies.

No matter how great or small your garden space, create the right habitat for butterflies like warm sunny spaces, shelter from wind, and plenty of water and food for both the adult butterfly and (caterpillar) larvae. That may mean using fewer insecticides that harm caterpillars and permitting a weed or two to grow in the garden.

Each butterfly type selects a plant species to host their young. Look first at which butterflies frequent your garden and which plants they like to feed on. For example the parsley caterpillar worm turns into the beautiful black Swallowtail. They feed on carrot, celery, parsley and parsnips. The Monarch caterpillar likes milkweed. A simple guide book will help you recognize each caterpillar.

Many types of flowers provide nectar butterflies. Many butterflies like the same flowers; mainly those with fragrance that provide the most nectar. Butterflies like flowers that are easy to land on and that have nectar readily accessible. That means either flat flowers, like those in the daisy family, or a cluster of small florets such as Lantana or Phlox. Plant single varieties of plants such as Zinnias and Marigolds. Even wonder why butterflies shun multi-petaled flowers like Roses or Peonies?

Butterflies have varying flower color preferences. Many types like purple, pink, yellow or white flowers. Since most insects don't see red and because red flowers usually lack fragrance, it's not a choice color to plant (of course, you'll probably want to add these to attract hummingbirds that prefer them).

Whichever flowers you choose, get the attention of butterflies flying by, with mass planting. Avoid planting a mixture of flower types in small areas. Also, butterflies are out all spring and summer. Choose some flowers for spring, summer and even fall so there will always be something blooming.

When flowers are scarce, supplement flower nectar with feeders filled with 10:1 water/sugar solution. A simple feeder can be made by placing a flat sponge soaked with this solution in a saucer. Butterflies can't swim so don't use an open pan of water. They do need water to drink, so you may want to line a depression in the yard with plastic and fill it with sand which you keep wet. Mud puddles are favored by butterflies, not just for water but for needed chemicals. Place a few big rocks in the garden for basking in the sun, since butterflies can't fly until they warm up.

Some butterflies prefer rotting fruit, carrion, or tree sap to flower nectar. The Anglewings, Admirals, Red Spotted Purple and Mourning Cloak will enjoy a recipe of smashed ripe bananas, sugar or molasses, stale beer or rum and fruit juices. Again, provide a landing sponge in the dish filled with this concoction. They'll also appreciate leftover melons or other rotting fruit.

The average life of a butterfly is just a few weeks. Be sure to include some host plants so you can enjoy the next generation. Plant extra parsley for the hungry black Swallowtail and invite that Queen-Anne's-lace that always volunteers among your flowers. Those violets invading your lawn were made just for Fritillaries, and butterfly weed will look as attractive in your garden as it does in the pasture. Other favorite host plants are Nettles (Admiral), Turtlehead (Baltimore), Thistles (Painted Lady), and Spicebush (Spicebush). Trees include Cherry (Tiger Swallowtail), Paw Paw (Zebra Swallowtail), Willow (Viceroy and Mourning Cloak) and Hackberry (Hackberry).

Some irresistible nectar plants are (Butterfly Bush), Lantana, Monarda, Coneflowers, Butterfly Weed, Asters and Phlox.

Charolais Seminar July 13

COOKSVILLE, Md. — On Saturday, July 13, the second Annual Charolais Education Seminar Day will be held at the Central Research and Education Center of the University of Maryland in Clarksville, Md.

The day is sponsored jointly by the Colonial Charolais Association, The Cooperative Extension Service of Howard County, and the University of Maryland.

Four pens of Charolais heifers and bulls will be available for the morning's judging contest. This judging event is a mandatory practice for many of the teams.

Official placings and reasons will be given by Dr. Bill Able, a nationally recognized livestock judge and formerly head of the Animal Science Department at Mississippi State University. Able has recently taken the position of executive vice president of the American International Charolais Association (AICA).

Lunch will be available at a reasonable cost between the morning judging contests and the fun contests planned for the juniors in the afternoon. All contests are open to all youth on a sign-up basis. The afternoon's fun will include a haystacking contest, leading an animal through an obstacle course and guessing the combined weight of several bulls. Prizes will be awarded to contestants placing 1st through 4th place in each contest.

Ida's Notebook

Do you ever get the feeling that stores are too big? The other day I went into a discount store for a few small items. I did not know where to start to look for them. It is impossible to see from one end of the store to the opposite end.

Where would I find fish food for my goldfish? After wandering around, I finally had to ask for help. In fact, I was lucky to find an employee who helped me. Next I needed a pen refill for my Parker pen. There were so many kinds available but only one would fit my pen.

It is not necessary to have such a wide variety of products for me. This only makes choosing a toothpaste more difficult. And, cosmetics take up shelf after shelf.

Even our local supermarket has recently revamped its arrangement of products. Now the cat food is where the potato chips had been and the soup is where the pickles were. Every manufacturer vies for a place on the store shelf.

Twenty years ago, when I took my widowed mother to a small country store, she could find everything she wanted in one short trip through the store. It was a place where she could be greeted by neighbors. Now, even though there are hundreds of cars in the parking lot, there may not be anyone inside that you know.

Oh yes, before I left that big store I had to find some candy. It could not be chocolate as that would melt in the glove compartment. It is kept there so that when I drive to our garden on the dairy farm, I will have some to share with the grandchildren who help me pick strawberries and sugar peas.

GRAIN FEEDING FOR PASTURE-BASED SYSTEMS

Larry Miller
Penn State University

In a recent issue of Grazing Gazette, we discussed the supplementation of energy and grain for lactating cows on a grazing system.

The sharply higher feed costs and relatively stable milk prices have dairy producers asking questions: How much can grain feeding be reduced? What feed ingredients can be used to reduce purchased feed costs? What feed ingredients can be eliminated?

The purpose of this article is to address some of these questions and to present some strategies to cope with the current situation.

Pasture Quality And Management

Maintaining high quality pasture through proper grazing management offers the best opportunity to reduce total feed cost. A system with several paddocks and a well-planned rotation provides the opportunity to have high quality forage available to cows at the correct time. Daily observations of pasture availability and planning on which paddocks to graze and which paddocks to harvest is needed. Daily observations of cows and their milk production is also needed.

With good grazing management which keeps pastures in a vegetative growth stage, pasture quality and quantity can be high during the entire growing season. The nutrient composition of an orchard grass-based pasture during a grazing season from a Penn State study is shown in Figure 1.

These results are from well managed pastures that were grazed at a stocking rate of 1.3 cows pre acre and had nine grazing rotations with a 14-day rest period in the spring to a 28-day rest period in the summer. This quality should be typical for a well managed pasture in Pennsylvania.

Total protein remained above 20 percent for the entire grazing season. Neutral detergent fiber (NDF) ranged from 45 to 55 percent, and in vitro dry matter digestibility (IVDMD) estimated in the laboratory averaged about 70 percent.

In general pastures containing some legumes will be higher in nutrient value (lower fiber and higher digestibility) than pure grass pastures. In some of our studies, including alfagraze with a grass pasture decreased NDF about 7 percent compared to the grass pasture. These high quality pastures will have an estimated net energy of lactation (NEL) value of .70 to .78 Mcal/lb of DM.

Clearly, this high quality pasture has a higher nutritive value than most of our stored forages which are usually harvested when the forage is more mature. We need to maximize the utilization and intake of this high quality, low cost forage, particularly during this time of high feed prices.

The dry matter intake (DMI) potential needs to be maximized. With high-quality pasture as the only forage, we expect dairy cows to consume about 3 percent of body weight from pasture DM.

For a 1,300-pound cow, this is about 40 pounds of DMI per day. Some Irish research and a recent study at Penn State reports DMI greater than 40 pounds/day when grazing management is optimized.

We can expect Holstein cows on only high quality pasture diets to produce about 40-45 pounds of 4 percent milk per day and maintain adequate body condition. Higher production levels will usually be at the cost of body weight and condition loss.

We can minimize the amount of supplemental grain fed in the later part of lactation when Holstein cows are below 40 to 45 pounds of milk per day and have a body condition score of 3.0 to 3.25. However, we still recommend feeding some grain, perhaps 4 to 6 pounds/cow/day in late lactation as a minimum.

Cows that are grazing require 2 to 4 pounds of grain/day just to meet the extra energy needs for walking to and from pastures twice daily. In addition, some grain or rumen available nonstructural carbohydrates (NSC) in the grain mix are beneficial to the rumen fermentation and as a carrier for needed minerals.

Nutritional Limitations To Pasture

Well-managed pastures produce a high quality but not perfect feed for high producing dairy cows. Some of the major nutrient deficiencies or limitations for high producing cows are:

- Inadequate total DMI and nutrient intake to support high levels of milk production.
- Total protein is high, but is highly degradable in the rumen and not efficiently utilized in the rumen unless NSC is provided to "capture" this protein. Rumen undegradable protein intake may be inadequate.
- The NSC content, which is the major source of energy for rumen microbes, is low compared to needs.
- The total fiber in high quality pasture is often too low in its ability to stimulate adequate cud chewing and rumination, or is low in "effective fiber."
- The amount of minerals including Ca, P, Mg, S, Cu, Zn, Se, and salt are usually inadequate.

These limitations or deficiencies in high quality pasture for high producing cows indicate that we need to:

- Supplement pasture with a properly formulated grain mixture in order to get more total DMI and energy intake. Providing a grain mixture at the rate of 1:4 grain:milk ratio is still profitable with today's feed prices for early lactation, high producing cows. A 1 pound milk response to 1 pound of grain fed is profitable with a milk price of 13¢/pound and grain at 9 or 10¢/pound.
- The grain mixture needs to contain economical grain sources that provide adequate NSC to maximize the utilization of the highly degradable pasture nitrogen in order to maximize rumen microbial protein production. Feeding a grain mixture that is high in NSC and at a rate of 1:4 grain:milk ratio will get the total ration (pasture & supplement) to about 35 percent NSC. Grains such as corn and barley, and by-products high in starch are the best sources of NSC. Corn gluten feed, hominy, and wheat mids are economical sources. Supplemental corn silage is a good forage to provide NSC and some needed fiber.
- Addition of a small amount of rumen undegradable protein (RUP) or bypass protein to the grain ration should be considered for high producing cows. If we are unable to fully utilize the highly degradable protein in high quality pasture with the NSC provided in grain mixture, then the high producing cow will likely have inadequate protein available to the small intestine. Research at Penn State and other locations indicate that 1 to 1.5 pounds of added RUP may be beneficial for high producing cows. Protein sources such as animal protein, brewers, distillers, and roasted/cooked soybeans are good sources of RUP. Costs need to be considered.
- The low "effective fiber" in pasture, which likely contributes to the low milk fat percent sometimes seen with grazing, suggests a benefit to additional fiber. A few pounds of long hay can help but will not increase the energy density of the total ration. Addition of fermentable fiber sources to the grain ration, such as soyhulls, beet pulp, brewers, distillers, and some by-products is often beneficial. Again, costs of these ingredients must be considered.

Other Considerations

As feed prices and availability change, it is more critical than ever to work closely with a qualified nutritionist. The current relationships of milk prices and feed costs do not call for much reduction in grain feeding for early lactation, high producing cows on most Pennsylvania farms. A separate grain ration or feeding program may be needed for early lactation, high producing cows from those in later lactation. We need to minimize wastage of expensive grain rations. Producers and nutritionists need to more critically look at feed additives that may not be cost effective, particularly for cows in the later part of lactation. Pastures are generally high in vitamins A (beta carotene), D, and E, and cows may do well on considerably less supplementation than is often practiced.

New Holland Natural Fiber Twine --

Your Natural Choice For Round Or Square Balers

- Uniform thickness- no thicks or thins
- Entirely biodegradable
- Treated for mildew resistance
- Consistent tensile/ knot strength

- A bale of New Holland natural twine always contains the exact footage shown on the label. This isn't the case with other brands. For instance, a bale of twine labeled 7,200 feet by another manufacturer may actually contain only 6,800 feet. This kind of inaccuracy could make a big difference in your production costs. And, in your profits.

NEW HOLLAND NATURAL FIBER TWINE

Feet Per Bale	Knot Strength (tensile strength)	Gross Weight (Lbs.)	End Use Application	Sale Price!
7,200*	160	40	Square Bale	$20.79 per bale
9,000*	130	40	Square Bale	$20.79 per bale
10,000*	115	40	Square Bale	$20.79 per bale
16,000*	180	40	Round Bale	$22.80 per bale

What's the importance of the terms tensile strength and knot strength?

Tensile strength refers to the amount of resistance twine provides before breaking But it's also it's also important to consider a twine s strength That's because when twine is tied into a knot its strength is reduced by almost 60%

New Holland natural twine has enhanced knot strength because we use only specially selected high tensile strength fibers to provide you with the best possible knot strength New Holland twine comes from Brazilian plantations where the leaves are hand selected and cut from the hardy sisal plant We harvest only the mature leaves at the bottom of the plant because of their longer, and much stronger fibers This kind of careful attention continues through the entire twine-producing process. In fact, there are a series of progressive quality controls through the various production stages to ensure twine uniformity and high tensile strength.

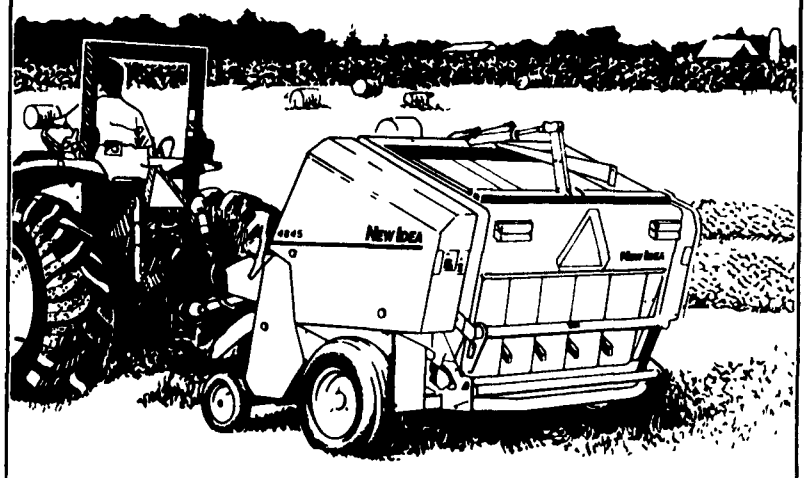
Dense Shell Won't Sag



New Idea bales won't sag like others.

- Fixed chamber design creates bale with dense shell that won't sag. New Idea bales keep their shape longer.
- Wide, endless belts handle leaf material carefully. More nutrient-rich leaves make it to the bale, fewer end up on the ground.
- Belt design is more reliable, with less downtime due to repair.
- Durable machine keeps working cutting after cutting, season after season
- Big, open throat lets you start bales easily with less plugging
- Three models available:

Model	Bale

PURINA PROFILE

Scott Bratton stands with his delivery truck that serves farm customers of the Brookland Mills at McVeytown in Mifflin County.

BROOKLAND MILL

Since an arsonist destroyed the Brookland Mill at the McVeytown Purina dealership, Jim Stauffer, general manager, and his family and friends who own the mill have been warehousing feed at a new location just across the Juniata River south of the center of town. Their service to customers has continued uninterrupted by trucking both bulk and bagged feed from the Camp Hill facility directly to their many dairy and other farm customers

Their home facility in Mifflin County, along with a branch at Richfield in Snyder County, serve customers in Mifflin, Juniata, Snyder, Union, and into Huntingdon Counties. The dealership has steadily grown since the 1980s. As in other areas, there is a push for farmers to increase herd size for a better return on their investment. But the small farm with family help that can work together also has a good chance to survive.

Jim believes that the industry's leaders of tomorrow will be those that adapt to the changing economic environment, search for best value, and maximize their return on investment.

As for Purina feeds, Jim believes you get more performance than with other feeds. Purina provides excellent quality, and when they test the ingredients, the test agrees with what is on the tag. In addition, Purina provides consultants to help on the farm. And at their research farm they conduct more tests than any other company.

"Purina continues to look at new ways to do things," Jim said. "That's why we can continue to serve our farm customers so well."

Jim Stauffer, general manager, of the Brookland Mills Inc., Purina dealership serves a five county area in central Pennsylvania.
